During ceremonies for winners of the ExCEL award, given for excellence in education, it's customary in Hardin County that local recipients are honored by having the day of the ceremony named after them by Hardin County Fiscal Court. Mark Roberts, the newest winner in Hardin County Schools, didn't want to let his own special day go unnoticed.

"First of all," Roberts began his acceptance speech, "I'd like to wish everyone a happy Mark Roberts Day," he joked.

'American Teacher' chronicles struggles of educators

By KELLY CANTRALL
kcantrall@thenewsenterprise.com

Tuesday's public viewing of an education-themed documentary is just the start of community-wide discussion of the field.

The United Way of Central Kentucky and several other organizations hosted a viewing of the documentary "American Teacher," and they hope to continue conversations on issues tackled in the film at an event next week.

The documentary, by Academy Award-winning director Vanessa Roth, follows four teachers across the country and chronicles the struggles they face in their careers. A teacher in Brooklyn, N.Y., contemplates returning to her job after giving birth, while a man in Keller, Texas, recounts his financial struggles and need to find a second job to supplement his teaching income. An educator in New Jersey discusses the reaction she received when she chose to work in education after graduating from Harvard University, and a teacher in San Francisco leaves his job for a more lucrative career in real estate, despite his love for education.

Almost half of currently-employed teachers will leave the field within five years, the film claims, citing factors such as pay and long hours. Most of the teachers in the film said they commonly worked 10 or more hours a day.

The U.S. also faces the impending retirement of 1.8 million public school teachers, more than half of the 3.2 million currently working, according to the film.

Nannette Johnston, superintendent of Hardin County Schools, said she knew of the challenges, but seeing them connected to "a face and a life" made an impact.

"The profession has gotten harder and harder over the years," Johnston said.

With these issues at hand, United Way, local school districts and the Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence invited viewers to attend the screening and share their thoughts on a written form afterward.

A roundtable Community Conversation is from 6 to 8 p.m. April 3 at the Hardin County Public Library in Elizabethtown. United Way hosts the event, and hopes residents attend and discuss areas they feel are most in need of addressing in education.

Gary French, superintendent of Elizabethtown Independent Schools, said forming partnerships with parents and community members is "critical."

United Way Executive Director Chris Wilborn hopes for strong attendance at the event.

"We want our community to talk to us and we want our community to be heard," he said.

Fiscal Court approves Hayden School Road widening project

Work already approved by Elizabethtown City Council

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Hardin Fiscal Court approved an interlocal agreement Tuesday with Elizabethtown and a second agreement with Silver Gate Properties to green light widening Hayden School Road.

Elizabethtown City Council already approved the agreement, which identifies needed improvements to the road as part of developing Ashton Park Subdivision by Silver Gate Properties.

The county agreed to make improvements to Hayden School Road between St. John Road and the corporate limits of Elizabethtown, including drainage and paving upgrades.

The county only will provide equipment and labor. All materials will be paid for by Silver Gate. The agreements say the county will identify all needed materials and material suppliers and Silver Gate will coordinate payment to ensure delivery of materials within 10 days of orders being placed.

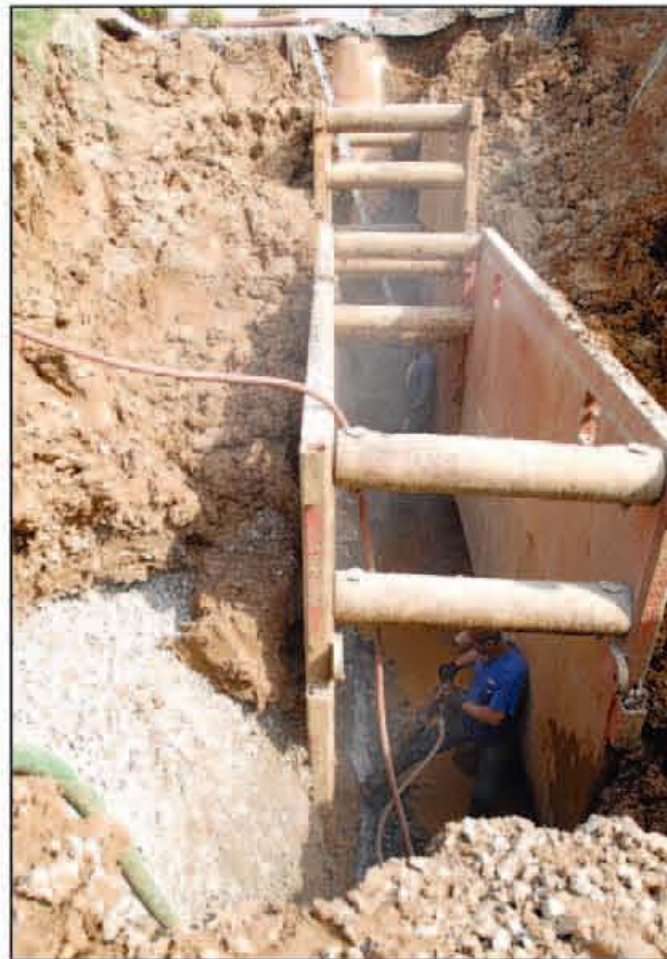

The work schedule will be mapped out by the county and the project must wrap up within a year of the agreement's adoption.

The city has acquired right-of-way permission, meaning consent from affected homeowners, to allow road work in the area. The county is not responsible for right-of-way costs or utility relocation, according to the agreement.

Improvements made by the county are expected to affect about four existing driveways, but Silver Gate must provide adequate notice to homeowners and manage pre-construction preparation, according to the agreements.

The county will perform final grade of shoulders. Ditches and disturbed areas will be seeded and strawed once work is finished. Silver Gate Properties is responsible for grass coverage.

Hart man named No. 3 on KSP's most wanted list

By DEBORAH HIGHLAND
The Daily News

A Hart County man has been added to Kentucky State Police Post 3's "Most Wanted" list.

A Hart County grand jury indicted Bruce D. Wilson, 31, and the mother of his two children, Erika Tweedy, on March 6 on charges of possession of a controlled substance, possession of methamphetamine precursors, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of marijuana, Trooper Timmy Jewell said.

Tweedy was arrested and lodged in the Hart County Jail, where she posted bond March 9. However, troopers have been unable to find Wilson to serve the indictment warrant on him, Jewell said.

Police opened an investigation into Wilson and Tweedy after they were called to Tweedy's home at 454 Old Dixie Road in Horse Cave to check on the welfare of everyone in the home, Jewell said.

Tweedy was in the home with two children not fathered by Wilson.

FRANKFORT

Synthetic drug ban passes committee

A house bill proposing a statewide ban on synthetic drugs passed the State Judiciary Committee earlier this week.

House Bill 481 aims to control sale, production and consumption of drugs designed to mimic the effects of marijuana and other illicit substances. Synthetic drugs are sold in smoke shops and gas stations but commonly are labeled "not for human consumption."

The state House of Representatives approved the bill earlier this month in a 96-0 vote. It was introduced March 14 in the Senate and, according to The Associated Press, made it out of committee with an 8-0 approval.

Legislation passed in 2011 made synthetic marijuana illegal but targeted chemicals in the drug that produce a "high." Manufacturers reacted by altering the chemicals used to make the drugs.

Bill could cut insurance costs for employers

The Senate Judiciary Committee is considering a House bill that could save Kentucky employers $600 million in unemployment insurance tax payments.

A proposal by House Speaker Pro Tem Larry Clark, a Louisville Democrat, would allow the state to borrow money to pay the interest on $948.7 million in federal loans during the recession to pay unemployment benefits. If the state doesn't make payments on the loans by Sept. 30, the unemployment insurance tax will increase from $63 to $420 per worker next year, Clark said.

RECOGNITION FOR HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL HALL OF FAME

The Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame was honored by the state Senate during Wednesday's session of the General Assembly as the new organization establishes Elizabethtown as its permanent home. The formal Senate citation, sponsored by Sen. Gathered for the Senate announcement are, from left, Parrett, Ron Bevers, Hall of Fame executive director Rick Whobrey, Hardin McLane, Rik Hawkins, Charlie Thurman, Bo O'Brien, Doug Gibson and KABC representatives Dave Henley and Ken Trivette. A similar resolution approved in the House was proposed by state Rep. Jimmie Lee.

Louisville man arrested in Five Star theft case

Atwell accused of stealing university-themed gloves, hiding them in his pants

By SARAH BENNETT

sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

Police arrested a suspect Monday night wanted in connection to multiple thefts at Elizabethtown Five Star locations earlier this month.

Jeffrey H. Atwell, 47, of Louisville, is accused of stealing university-themed gloves from Five Star gas station shelves and hiding them in his pants. The suspect then made a purchase at the register before leaving the scene in a red-and-tan Mercury Mountaineer.

These thefts allegedly occurred March 2 at the 1600 N. Dixie Ave. and 1046 N. Mulberry St. locations in Elizabethtown, police said.

According to an Elizabethtown Police Department news release, officers responded to the 200 block of Towne Drive in reference to an off-duty Radcliff police officer who recognized the SUV as the vehicle driven by the suspect.

Atwell was stopped and officers identified him as the man wanted in connection to these thefts, according to the release.

He is lodged at the Hardin County Detention Center and is charged with theft by unlawful taking — shoplifting. He's under a $500 cash bond for the charge.

Because the total value of the stolen gloves amounts to less than $500, Atwell faces a misdemeanor theft charge punishable by up to 12 months in jail.

However, in addition to the theft charges, he also faces first-degree promoting contraband, first-degree possession of a controlled substance and possession of drug paraphernalia. The first two charges are felonies, for which he's being held in lieu of a $5,000 cash bond.

Beshear calls for lawmakers to pass budget

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — With time running out in this year's legislative session, Gov. Steve Beshear on Wednesday called on lawmakers to reach an agreement on competing budget proposals so that he won't have to call them back to Frankfort to finish their work. "I think the one thing the people of Kentucky would not accept is the legislature leaving town without a budget," Beshear said. "And so I feel confident that they all understand that, and they're going to work hard to make that happen."

But House Speaker Greg Stumbo said Wednesday that budget talks have stalled, and he raised the specter of adjourning the legislative session without reaching an agreement. The major sticking point involves whether to pre-approve the authorization of $100 million in debt for the School Facilities Construction Commission to build new schools beginning in 2014. The Senate wants to delete that language from the budget proposal. The House insists on keeping it. "The precious minutes are ticking by," he said. Negotiations have been underway since Monday between House and Senate leaders to try to reach a compromise on a $19 billion budget that requires sharp cuts to most government agencies and programs. The negotiators face a self-imposed 3 a.m. EDT Thursday deadline for reaching an agreement so that it can be voted on by the full House and Senate by Friday evening, which is the last day for lawmakers to vote on bills.

Joseph Panossian, a longtime Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press who covered transformative events from the Lebanese civil war to the U.S. invasion of Iraq, has died, his family said Wednesday. He was 74. Panossian, who was undergoing chemotherapy for lung cancer, died March 13 in Armenia, where he had been living for the past three years, said his wife, Annie. He was described by colleagues as always ready with a joke to defuse the region's stressful and often dangerous news events. Panossian retired from the AP in 2007 after 45 years. "Joe was by far the best Arabic linguist and translator on the staff," said Robert H. Reid, AP's Middle East regional editor. "He was devoted to the AP and never would let illness, errands or, during the civil war, shell fire keep him from coming to work and doing the best possible job." Born in 1937 in Jaffa in British-mandate Palestine, Panossian was displaced to east Jerusalem following the creation of Israel in 1948. He moved to Lebanon in 1951.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

POPE ENDS CUBA TRIP URGING GREATER OPENINGS FOR CHURCH ON COMMUNIST-LED ISLAND. Pope Benedict XVI demanded more freedom for the Catholic Church in communist-run Cuba and preached against "fanaticism" in an unusually political sermon before hundreds of thousands at Revolution Plaza, with President Raul Castro in the front row.

Later, the president's brother, revolutionary leader Fidel, grilled the pontiff on changes in church liturgy and his role as spiritual leader of the world's Catholics, a Vatican spokesman said.

Benedict's homily was a not-so-subtle jab at the island's leadership before a vast crowd of Cubans, both in the sprawling plaza and watching on television. But he also clearly urged an end to Cuba's isolation, a reference to the 50-year U.S. economic embargo and the inability of 11 American presidents and brothers Fidel and Raul Castro to forge peace.

"Cuba and the world need change, but this will occur only if each one is in a position to seek the truth and chooses the way of love, sowing reconciliation and fraternity," Benedict said. The remark built upon the famed call of his predecessor, John Paul II, who said in his groundbreaking 1998 visit that Cuba should "open itself up to the world, and may the world open itself up to Cuba."

With the country's leadership listening from front-row seats, Benedict referred to the biblical account of how youths persecuted by the Babylonian king "preferred to face death by fire rather than betray their conscience and their faith."

IF THE INSURANCE MAN-DATE FALLS, COURT SEEMS READY TO TOSS SEVERAL OTHER PARTS OF HEALTH LAW. The Supreme Court signaled Wednesday it could throw out other key parts of President Barack Obama's health care law if it first finds the individual insurance requirement unconstitutional.

On the third and last day of arguments, the justices appeared to accept the administration's argument that at least two important insurance changes are so closely tied to the insurance requirement that they could not survive without it.

Less clear was whether the court would conclude the entire law, with its hundreds of unrelated provisions, would have to be cast aside.

The justices also spent part of the day considering a challenge by 26 states to the expansion of the Medicaid program for low-income Americans, an important feature in the effort extending health insurance to an additional 30 million people.

The court's liberal justices made clear they will vote to uphold the Medicaid expansion, which would take in 15 million people with the federal government paying almost all the costs.

FORMER PRESIDENT GEORGE H.W. BUSH FORMALLY TO BACK ROMNEY. Former President George H.W. Bush plans to endorse Mitt Romney at an event Thursday in Houston.

Romney spokeswoman Gail Gitcho said the two will appear together and speak to reporters.

Formal backing from the 41st president is another sign that the Republican Party is uniting behind Romney as pressure builds on challengers Rick Santorum and Newt Gingrich to leave the race.

The elder Bush has offered encouraging words to Romney throughout the primary season but had withheld a formal endorsement. Former first lady Barbara Bush has formally backed Romney. She recorded automated telephone calls for him during the primary in Ohio.

Their son, former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, endorsed Romney last week.

TRAYVON INC: FROM HOODIE SALES TO TRADEMARKS, SLAIN FLA TEEN'S CASE BECOMES BIG BUSINESS. From the T-shirt and hoodie sales to trademarking slogans like "Justice for Trayvon" to the pass-the-hat rallies that bring in thousands, the case of an unarmed black teenager killed by a neighborhood watch volunteer is quickly turning into an Internet-fueled brand.

Websites are hawking key chains bearing Trayvon Martin's likeness. His parents have bought two trademarks, saying they hope to raise money to help other families struck by tragedy. Trayvon clothes, bumper stickers, buttons and posters are up for grabs on eBay.

Vendors selling Martin T-shirts and hoodies have become fixtures at rallies in Sanford, the central Florida town where Martin was shot last month. At one Sanford rally this week, a man had a variety of T-shirts laid out on the ground as marchers went by, yelling out, "I've got every size!"

The Martin shooting by neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman, who said he shot the 17-year-old Miami teen in self-defense, has inflamed racial tensions across the country, brought out thousands for rallies, prompted a civil rights probe and a personal reference to the case by President Barack Obama.

A phenomenon on that scale is bound to be commercialized, said Donna Hoffman, a marketing professor at the University of California-Riverside.

JETBLUE CAPTAIN WHO DISRUPTED FLIGHT CHARGED WITH INTERFERING WITH CREW ON VEGAS-BOUND PLANE. A JetBlue Airways captain who sprinted through the cabin of a Las Vegas-bound flight screaming about terrorists, Jesus and Sept. 11 was charged Wednesday with interfering with a flight crew, federal authorities said.

Captain Clayton Osborn told his co-pilot that "things just don't matter" shortly after JetBlue Flight 191 from New York departed Tuesday, according to an affidavit. Osborn, who was ultimately tackled by passengers while the plane made an emergency landing in Texas, told his co-pilot that "we're not going to Vegas" and began what was described as a sermon, the court documents said.

Hall of fame begins journey

ISSUE: Basketball Hall of Fame tips offOUR VIEW: Don't forget earliest contributors

With the selection of its executive director and announcement of its first class of inductees, excitement is building locally for the Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame.

An idea of the Kentucky Association of Basketball Coaches, the hall's most pressing goal is to induct 100 people of distinction in time for the 100th anniversary of organized high school basketball in Kentucky. That occurs in 2018.

Much remains to be done between now and then, but the first signs of success are on the board.

Rick Whobrey proved to be an ideal candidate for the executive director's position. He combines a heartfelt, sincere love for the game with a roll-up-your-sleeves, can-do attitude. After spending most of his working life in management at Kentucky Farm Bureau, Whobrey also has a familiarity with the entire state, invaluable contacts and the vitally important business acumen.

Additionally, by announcing its first group of honorees, the hall of fame suddenly moves from concept to reality. The inductees represent a span of almost 50 years and encompass multiple races, both genders and urban and rural schools.

There's someone for everyone in the state to cheer for.

While selection is based solely on high school accomplishments, many of the honorees are known for basketball success in college and professional realms as players and in coaching. The legendary names include Wallace "Wah Wah" Jones, King Kelly Coleman, Clem Haskins, Rex Chapman and Richie Farmer.

This editorial represents a consensus of The News-Enterprise editorial board.

And at the center of all this newfound excitement is Elizabethtown.

The community has an opportunity to enjoy the hall experience July 14 during an induction ceremony and dinner at the Historic State Theater. Invitations have been extended to all honorees and their families.

This event promises to become a new fixture on Hardin County's summer schedule. It will provide an enjoyable night of memories and celebration. For a state that lives and breathes basketball, Elizabethtown will bask annually in the limelight.

While Hall of Fame organizers are focused on fundraising and the future, it's important for local residents to remember two people who were vital in landing this opportunity locally.

In his former position as Chamber of Commerce director, Rik Hawkins overwhelmed KABC decision makers searching for a host city with enthusiastic interest and professional support.

Secondly, North Hardin's boys' basketball coach Ron Bevars — himself a potential inductee — influenced the decision from his role inside the coaches' organization. Bevars' voice also bridged some long-standing, north-south rivalries in the county.

While dozens of others have contributed time, energy and ideas and hundreds, if not thousands, eventually will add financial and personal backing, Hawkins and Bevars deserve special distinction for their contributions when a fledgling idea needed their care and influence.

IN OTHER VIEWS

Asma al-Assad: Marie Antoinette of the Arab world

The Arab Spring appears to have produced its own Marie Antoinette — brighter and better educated than the original and with a much tougher husband, but with the same acquisitive tastes.

She is Asma al-Assad, 36, wife of Syrian dictator Bashar al-Assad, and all through the yearlong uprising that has left more than 9,000 of her countrymen dead in the indiscriminate shelling of neighborhoods, whole cities even, Asma has been ordering tens of thousands of dollars' worth of luxury goods from Europe.

The Syrian opposition somehow got hold of emails detailing her extensive purchases — such as handmade furniture, expensive jewelry, ornate candlesticks, a pair of Christian Louboutin patent-leather pumps with towering heels for $1,230, a custom dining-room table with seating for eight.

After 12 previous rounds of sanctions, these purchases persuaded the European Union and Turkey to finally get tough.

"It is perhaps this that persuaded us to toughen the sanctions," said French foreign minister Alain Juppe.

Her credit cards, and those of the other womenfolk in the Assad family, have been blocked in the EU and they, with the exception of Asma, are barred from traveling there.

Asma, British-born but of Syrian descent, is a British citizen and can travel there, however. She just can't spend money. A look at her purchases indicated it might be a hardship.

The Guardian posted some of her shopping trophies online. Not that she was profligate. She boasted of a 15 percent discount on a $3,445 glowing red Ming Luce vase. Just what one needs, along with a silver fondue set and a gold-leaf mirror decorated with butterflies, to ride out a revolution.

Only twice do her purchases indicate any sense of danger — a bulletproof twill blazer and bulletproof barn coat for her husband.

The woman is no dummy.

Born in England, her father was a London cardiologist. She graduated from a prestigious college with a degree in computer science and went on to a successful career as an investment banker.

She married Bashir in December 2000, and the couple have three children. But her husband's tight cocoon of family members and fellow Alawite tribesmen, plus that unlimited expense account, seems to have divorced the entire Assad clan from what was happening in the Arab street.

According to an email obtained by The Guardian, she sought a friend's opinion of a pair of $4,900 shoes with crystal-encrusted 6-1/4-inch heels. The friend replied, perhaps presciently, "I don't think they're going 2 B useful anytime soon unfortunately."

May we suggest a good pair of running shoes instead? Better for beating the mob to the airport.

Despots need to learn truth of diplomacy

The dictionary defines "diplomacy" as the "art and practice of conducting negotiations," but one incisive wag said the term is really "the art of saying 'nice doggie' till you can find a rock." So who has the stones required to stop Iran from acquiring the nuclear weapons its needs, not for deterrence as its apologists claim, but to escalate war against Israel, America and the West?

The United States does, but President Barack Obama is not eager to utilize them. That's understandable: Americans are war-weary. But if Iran's rulers do acquire nuclear weapons on Obama's watch, and if that leads to a 21st century bloodier than the 20th, history will not judge him kindly.

It is possible that Israelis

CLIFFORD MAY

will do the job others don't want to do. Obama, in his American Israel Public Affairs Committee remarks, recognized the legitimacy of their concerns, acknowledging that "no Israeli government can tolerate a nuclear weapon in the hands of a regime that denies the Holocaust, threatens to wipe Israel off the map and sponsors terrorist groups committed to Israel's destruction."

Israelis would like nothing better than to resolve this conflict diplomatically. But Iran's rulers refuse even to talk with leaders of the Jewish state. Their intransigence is seldom noted, much less criticized.

Between diplomacy and warfare lie economic sanctions. Israeli leaders have long been strongly supportive of the tough measures produced by Congress and signed by Obama. Europeans, too, have imposed stiff sanctions.

What's the point? For one, sanctions, and the continuing debate they provoke, remind the "international community" of the threat Iran's theocrats pose. Second, it's always useful to weaken an enemy, and sanctions have been enfeebling Iran's oil-based economy. Finally, should more kinetic measures be used to stop Iran's nuclear-weapons program, it will be vital for sanctions to be in place — and remain in place — during whatever diplomatic palaver follows.

Opponents of sanctions and more forceful measures don't get this. They argue sanctions are an impediment to diplomacy. Suzanne Maloney, a senior fellow at the Saban Center at the Brookings Institute, wrote recently that "the U.S. cannot hope to bargain with a country whose economy it is trying to disrupt and destroy."

She has it exactly backward, as anyone who has ever been involved in negotiations should recognize. If we want Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei and the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps to stop doing what they are doing — building nuclear weapons, supporting terrorists, threatening neighbors, oppressing their people — we must do more than "nudge" them. We must offer them something of great value.

What would Maloney have us put on the table other than an end to sanctions and no use of force — or no further use of force? What else does she imagine they would accept in exchange for the chance to possess weapons they see as key to achieving the goals of Iran's Islamic Revolution — which include hegemony in the Middle East in the short run and "a world without America" and the extermination of Israel somewhere along the way?

When reasonable, peace-loving people are involved, the "art and practice of conducting negotiations" can lead to compromise and the resolution of conflicts. But when dealing with despots, there are no talking cures. Iran's rulers see the U.S. as materialistic, decadent, weak-willed and tired of the burdens of leadership. They are convinced Obama will accept what he has called "unacceptable," that he will allow the world's worst dictators — and leading sponsors of terrorism — to arm themselves with the world's worst weapons.

A new round of diplomacy is scheduled to begin next month in Geneva. For there to be any small chance of success, Iran's rulers must feel pressured and vulnerable. They must take seriously the possibility that Americans and/or Israelis have rocks and are prepared to use them.

WARRANTS: 23 charges issued for pill trafficking

were Hardin County residents and 13 of the 21 lived in Elizabethtown, according to a Kentucky State Police news release. Two individuals also were arrested for unrelated bench warrants for failure to appear.

The suspects were not necessarily working together, Eckart said, but several were acquaintances. Wednesday's roundup was the result of several months' worth of investigation, he said.

"This was a longer investigation where we couldn't arrest right away," he said.

According to KSP, 23 charges were issued for trafficking in prescription pills while seven were issued for trafficking in methamphetamine.

Eight charges were issued for trafficking within 1,000 feet of a school, police said.

Eckart said it has been a while since area police executed a drug roundup of this scale in Hardin County. The effort was shared by multiple local agencies, including the task force, KSP, Elizabethtown Police Department, Radcliff Police Department, the Hardin County Detention Center and the Hardin County Sheriff's Office.

KSP's K-9 and Drug Enforcement and Special Investigation sections also assisted, he said.

Sarah Bennett can be reached at (270) 505-1750.

CLEANUP: Some large items picked up by request only will not be collected during this sweep of the city.

Radcliff also will host a large-item pickup in April when stoves, washers, dryers, hot water heaters, paint sealed in original containers, batteries and up to six tires per household will be accepted. Appliances such as refrigerators, freezers and air conditioners, must have Freon removed and be tagged by a certified technician before they will be accepted.

Used motor oil also will be accepted, but must be in a sealed container and properly labeled.

Items not collected by the city during cleanup efforts include hazardous materials, liquids and poisons.

Residents must call 351-8150 to make arrangements for pickup of appliances or other large items.

Waste Management also will pick up nonrecyclable items free of charge for Radcliff customers, including furniture and mattresses. Pickups can be arranged by calling Waste Management at (502) 966-0117.

Elizabethtown will collect junk and debris April 2-27 and appliances April 23-27.

As part of the junk and debris schedule, limited brush pickup will be offered. Residents should place items near the street but out of the path of traffic. Elizabethtown residents also should avoid placing debris directly under overhead power lines and bulky items should be placed in open spaces easily accessible to equipment, according to Elizabethtown Department of Public Works officials.

Large items should not be mixed with small or bagged items and loose items should be secured in high-quality, clear plastic bags not to exceed 50 pounds in weight. Residents should not use cardboard boxes or trash cans to store debris. Appropriate plastic bags can be purchased at the Department of Public Works, 301 Waterworks Drive, or Pritchard Community Center. The cost is $3 for 25 bags or $27 for a case of 250 bags.

Garbage, hazardous materials, liquids, construction debris, tires and junk autos will not be collected during Elizabethtown cleanup.

During appliance pickup, dehumidifiers, washing machines, dryers, ranges and water heaters will be collected and recycled on a call-in basis only. For this service, call 765-6121, Ext. 230.

Just as in Radcliff, appliances must be emptied of Freon and tagged by a certified technician.

DEAR ABBY

Wife suspects husband didn't vacation by himself

Dear Abby: "Darrel" and I have been married 28 years. I thought we had an easy, comfortable relationship. We have no children; it's just the two of us with a large family of furry animals. We don't take vacations together because one of us has to be home to care for the animals.

Last year Darrel took four trips to Las Vegas — two for business and two for special sporting events. I'm beginning to get little nagging signals he may not have been on these trips alone.

He shuts his phone off for hours at a time and changed the password on his computer after I had to get on it for a security update. The last time he went, he told me he had won two tickets in Las Vegas to a show, so I asked him to bring the extra one home so I could see it. When he returned, he didn't have it. He said he had misplaced it.

There are other things, too, and I don't know what to think. I don't want to hurt his feelings if there isn't anything going on, but I need to know. What do I do? — What Happened in Vegas?

■ Dear What Happened in Vegas: If your intuition is telling you something is wrong, listen to it. Tell Darrel you're feeling insecure and why. Start going with him to Las Vegas.

JEANNIE PHILLIPS

Hire a pet sitter if necessary. It will be money well spent. If your husband isn't open to it, hire a private investigator to tell you what's going on. Clearly, something is up.

SCHOOL BULLIES. Dear Abby: My 7-year-old son, "Kenny," is being bullied at school. He was punched so hard in the stomach I had to get him medical care. I have called the school board and no one has done anything about it. What else can I do? Kenny is small for his age and weighs only 40 pounds. I'm worried for him. — Worried About My Boy in Tulsa

■ Dear Worried: Assuming you already have spoken to your son's teacher and the principal of Kenny's school, as well as having contacted the school board, your next step would be to discuss this with a lawyer. The fact that your son was hit so hard he needed medical attention should be all the proof he or she needs to help you deal with this.

'TWEEN 12 & 20

I plan to legally change my name

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 17-year-old guy and will attend college this fall. My school days have been marred because of my unusual first and last name. People who don't know me find it difficult to pronounce. A lot of people who know me make fun of it. I plan to legally change my name as soon as I turn 18. This bothers my family. They show me difficult names to pronounce of movie stars, musicians and even politicians. They say no one today changes a name. I hate my name and will change it.

I have read your column regularly for quite some time, and I know you encourage teens who dislike their names to legally change them. I know you will agree with me, but I'd be happy if you would print my letter so I can present your answer to my family so they might see things my way. — Nameless, East Chicago, Ind.

■ Nameless: I totally agree a change of your name is in order. It would be unwise to suffer just because your family wants you to keep your name. It's true many people today chose to keep their original names, even if they are difficult to pronounce. But some well-known personalities including John Denver, Doris Day, Engelbert Humperdinck, the late great Walter Matthau and Academy Award winning Karl Malden chose to change their names. Actor and director Woody Allen was once known as Allen Konigsberg.

CANCEL THE WEDDING. Dr. Wallace: I'm really confused and need your advice even though I might not take it. I'm 19 and engaged to Jerry, who is 22. We set the date on July 21, his 23rd birthday.

ROBERT WALLACE

Before we met, Jerry was going with a girl named Colleen. Last week, Jerry told me Colleen was five months pregnant and admitted he was the father. I went to where she was working to see for myself if she was pregnant, and it was obvious she was.

Jerry wants to go ahead with our marriage, but now I'm not so sure I want to go through with the ceremony at this time. What is your suggestion? — Nameless, St. Louis, Mo.

■ Nameless: Cancel the wedding. Jerry has a legal obligation to his baby, and it may be more than a marriage could endure.

YOU HAVE A WISE GIRLFRIEND. Dr. Wallace: I'm 18, and my girlfriend is 17. We haven't had sex yet (She's a virgin), but it is inevitable it will happen, even though I'm not pushing for anything. My question is, should we plan our first sexual encounter or should we just let it happen when the right moment comes along? My girlfriend, at this moment, is afraid having sex will mess up our relationship. I'm sure she will eventually change her mind, even though she says she won't. — Devin, Columbus, Ohio

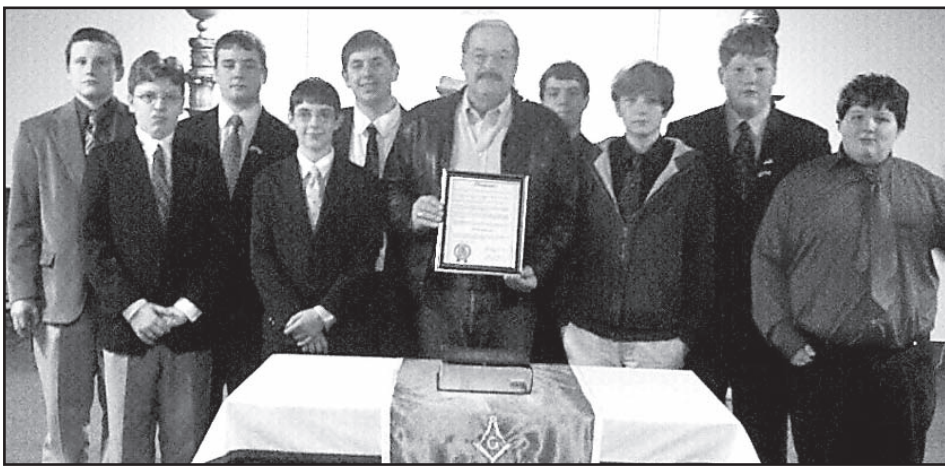

■ Devin: You are fortunate you have such a wise girlfriend. She speaks the truth. It is not inevitable teens going together will have sex. It's obvious sex is on your mind, and it's also obvious if you don't get it off of your mind, you and your girlfriend will spend a lot of time disagreeing over something that probably won't happen.

LUPRESTO NAMED CKAG ARTIST OF THE MONTH

The Central Kentucky Art Guild held its monthly meeting March 19 at Nolin RECC in Elizabethtown. The Artist of the Month, voted on by the membership in attendance, was Joyce Lupresto of Elizabethtown. Her watercolor, "My Tomatoes," was painted from photographs of her garden. The next meeting is April 16 at Nolin RECC in Elizabethtown. Guests and interested individuals always are welcome. The business meeting and program are part of the regular meeting held the third Monday of the month.

Potted Few members have program on Habitat

The Fort Knox Potted Few Garden Club recently met in the Radcliff home of Lahoma Baymor with club member Bonnie Lush as co-host. After members enjoyed the opening social and several brunch treats, club president Anneliese Knoll opened the business meeting.

The program for the month was all about Habitat for Humanity and presented by Larry Mengel, executive director and vice president of Hardin County Habitat for Humanity. Mengel has been with Habitat for more than 18 years and shared many facts about the program. This initiative to help build homes for citizens who would otherwise not be able to afford it has been a wonderful success. Garden club members were encouraged to support the effort by donating

First Presbyterian Church members support Warm Blessings

Members and friends of First Presbyterian Church recently welcomed Warm Blessings volunteers to a weekly Lenten soup supper to recognize the program's work to serve individuals and families who are at risk in the community. The Lenten suppers offer a time to emphasize the relationship between God and human beings and are an occasion to give thanks for God's blessings by recognizing how God is working in our community to care for the most vulnerable.

Warm Blessings Executive Board Chairwoman Linda Funk shared the goal of making patrons of the program feel welcome and to serve them with compassion. She shared how so many have little self worth or feelings of empowerment and living in poverty takes away dignity. Anyone who feels they need a warm blessing, hot meal or use of the shower or washer and dryer is welcome with no question. Personal items often are distributed and crisis assistance is given when possible or information regarding other helping organizations is given. She said the program also offers people in our community the opportunity to make a direct and personal difference in the lives of people who are struggling.

LETTER OF THANKS

New Horizon members appreciate support for mission trip

New Horizon Baptist Fellowship would like to thank all the churches from Hardin and LaRue county, businesses and individuals who helped with sending a semi-truck load of much needed supplies to West Liberty on March 24.

New Horizon Baptist and Harvestland Community from Hodgenville took 20 people to West Liberty March 24 to deliver the supplies and spent the day working with clean up and organizing the supplies for distribution. Our plan is to return to West Liberty the week of June 2 through 9 and assist families in the rebuilding of their homes. We hope to return with another truck load of supplies and material and will be accepting donations through noon May 30.

In 32 years of being involved with missions around the world and responding to help people after seeing the destruction and devastation in West Liberty, I have never seen a greater need for help. Again, thank you to all who helped in any way and for those who would like to be involved in the June 2-9 mission trip, please call 737-4386 and leave a message for the pastor or drop off your donations at the church on Sunday or Wednesday of each week.

Indian company runs into visa problems

Butler County manufacturer wants to expand, but red tape is keeping its training staff at home

By ROBYN L. MINOR
The Daily News

BOWLING GREEN – It's hoped that a recent meeting in Washington, D.C., will lead to an $18 million investment and 100 jobs in southcentral Kentucky.

Rodney Kirtley, executive director of the Barren River Area Development District, said he sometimes questions the value of conferences, but he hopes one he recently attended in Washington pays off.

One of the presenters was about to leave for a meeting in Mumbai, India.

"When he heard we were having problems getting visas for an Indian company in Butler County, he offered to help," Kirtley told the BRADD board Monday.

"This company is wanting to spend another $18 million and add another 100 jobs, but they have to be able to get the trainers here," Kirtley said.

That company, Kentucky Copper, began operations last year in Morgantown and now has more than 50 employees.

"My understanding of their manufacturing process now is that they take these (copper) rods and make really thin wire out of it," Butler County Judge-Executive David Fields said. "They are wanting to add a second process in which they would be making the rods."

Fields said the difficulty in acquiring the visas lies with the Indian government, so the consultant will see what barriers need to be cleared to bring the engineers here.

"It's not that they want to bring people here to stay," Fields said. "They just want to be able to bring the engineers here to train people."

Fields said Kentucky Copper has manufacturing plants in India, Russia and Japan.

"This is their first plant in the United States," he said.

Fields and Kirtley said they hope the visa issue can be worked out so the expansion can move forward.

Express Scripts may close merger deal next week

Shares of Express Scripts Inc. and Medco Health Solutions Inc. jumped Wednesday after the pharmacy benefits managers said their $29.1 billion combination could close as soon as next week.

Express Scripts, which announced its plan to buy Medco last July, had said recently it expected the deal to close early in the second quarter. Shareholders from both companies already have approved the acquisition, but the Federal Trade Commission is still reviewing it.

In July, Express Scripts of St. Louis announced its plan to offer $28.80 in cash and a portion of an Express Scripts share valued at $42.56 for each share of Medco, based in Franklin Lakes, N.J. The FTC has been reviewing the transaction for several months.

Cattle brokers in Metcalfe plead guilty to scheme

The Associated Press

GLASGOW – Four men associated with a cattle brokerage company have pleaded guilty to being involved in what prosecutors called a check-kiting scheme that cost 172 farmers more than $840,000.

The Glasgow Daily Times reports the men – Thomas P. Gibson, Steve McDonald, Grant Gibson and Darren Brangers – entered pleas Tuesday in Metcalfe Circuit Court. They also agreed to fully repay farmers who sold cattle to Eastern Livestock.

The men were indicted on a charge of engaging in organized crime and 172 counts of theft by deception by complicity.

The newspaper reports McDonald and Thomas Gibson pleaded guilty to the original charges while Grant Gibson and Brangers pleaded guilty to amended charges of facilitation to engaging in organized crime and theft by deception.

Pay student loans with retirement savings?

Dear Debt Adviser: I'm 37, married with three kids and have about $15,000 in college debt from my MBA expenses. Should I withdraw retirement savings from my 401(k) or Roth individual retirement account to pay off the debt? I'm sick of having this debt and want to be done with it now. Can I avoid penalties if the retirement money is used to pay off student loans? – Randy

■ Dear Randy: With three kids, I'd expect you to have developed more patience by now. Still, 37 is young in the scheme of things.

I have a three-part answer. Yes, generally speaking, you can withdraw money from your IRA to pay higher education expenses without penalty.

You cannot, however, withdraw funds from your 401(k) without paying the 10 percent early-withdrawal penalty.

I don't believe you should withdraw the money from your retirement accounts.

You are responsible for a spouse and three children. Though it may be argued that she is equally responsible for you and the kids, we are talking about you – and you are most certainly on the hook.

In my experience as a father

and husband, I can tell you there is a very good chance in the next five to 10 years the $15,000 you are considering withdrawing may be needed for something more important than retiring an education debt you are "sick of having." Life has a way of sending the unexpected our way at the least convenient time, and often the anticipated event comes with a high price tag. Ideally, you have an emergency savings account of six to 12 months of living expenses put aside to help fund life's financial curveballs, but you may find additional money is required.

Also, the $15,000 you remove from retirement funds now could, if left where it is, be worth in the neighborhood of $80,000 by the time you're 67. Even when you take into consideration inflation, you could be missing out on the equivalent of $40,000 if you remove the $15,000 now. As an MBA, you'll no doubt appreciate the time value of money.

Let me suggest that a better idea may be to develop a plan to pay down your college debt more quickly.

Let's do some math. If we assume you have another 10 years to pay on your loan and your interest rate is 6 percent, your monthly payment is approximately $167 per month. If you were to add an additional $500 to each payment, for a total of $667 each month, your debt would be paid off in two short years. To pay off the debt in one year, you would need to boost your monthly payment by $1,125.

Whether you pay off your student loans sooner or later, my guess is once you know this debt is heading for the door, you won't feel the need to incur a penalty to send it on its way immediately.

Should you decide to withdraw retirement savings from your IRA, I would recommend you consult with a tax-planning professional to assure that you follow all the proper procedures. You do not want to complicate an already bad financial move with a problem with the Internal Revenue Service.

Understanding 'The Hunger Games'

Are audiences comprehending movie's social commentary?

By BECCA OWSLEY
bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

Kentucky has more than basketball to brag about this week. Two Kentucky natives are starring in the greatly anticipated film "The Hunger Games."

Jennifer Lawrence (Katniss) is from Louisville and Josh Hutcherson (Peeta) is from Union.

Teenage fans have talked nonstop about the film adaptation of the Suzanne Collins books, but I wonder if they grasp the philosophical applications or the sheer horror of what's taking place.

The plot of the film is disturbing. The districts, which once led a rebellion, are punished by a ruling authority. Once a year, two teens are drawn from each district to participate in war games. They are then paraded around as heroes for all to watch and cheer for. The winner of the games is rewarded with help for their impoverished district.

But there can be only one winner and by winner I mean survivor. The children, some as young as 12, have to try to kill one another until only one is left alive, all while the world watches the blood sport in a very warped reality television show.

If you are thinking "The Lord of the Flies" meets "The Running Man" you're getting close to the plot.

I left the film disturbed. This is a very popular book series that many have recommended to me, but few comment about the disturbing nature of the content, children killing children.

One scene in particular haunted me as I left the theater. When participants first are brought to the game arena, it's a free-for-all and many viciously attack and kill each other.

If the point of this plot line is to make viewers leave disturbed, then it did its job. Philosophically, it explores how reality television creates a warped fan base to cheer on the victor. The question remains: Will reality television ever go this far, a gladiator type of entertainment?

'The Hunger Games'

Rated PG-13 for intense violent thematic material and disturbing images — all involving teens
Release date: March 23
Runtime: 142 minutes

WELL-MADE,
YET DISTURBING

It also begs another question: Has society become so desensitized to violence that a story such as "The Hunger Games" does not bother us?

It doesn't seem to bother many teens.

Over the weekend when I asked several teens if they liked the movie, most of their answers had to do with what may have been left out of the film or how attractive the two male stars are. When I asked them if the story of people their age killing each other to win bothered them, few gave it a second thought.

It also contains some classic sci-fi elements dealing with a grim futurist society with "big brother" control.

As a film, "The Hunger Games" is a much better adaptation than the "Twilight" saga. It is a quality film directed by Gary Ross ("Seabiscuit") and featuring Lawrence ("Winter's Bone") both previously nominated for Oscars. I believe the direction and casting of quality actors created a better movie than previous teen-followed books made into movies. Stanley Tucci ("Captain America"), Elizabeth Banks ("Man on a Ledge"), Donald Sutherland ("M*A*S*H") and Woody Harrelson ("Friends with Benefits") are anchors for their younger cast mates.

Liam Hemsworth ("The Last Song" and younger brother to Chris Hemsworth who played "Thor") and Hutcherson ("Journey 2: The Mysterious Island") also give good performances.

Rocker Lenny Kravitz also makes an appearance.

I left the film wanting to know what happened next, which means I cared enough about these characters to want to see how their lives play out in the remaining two books. This is a result of good performances.

But I also left the movie with an uneasy feeling in the pit of my stomach, wondering if it is right to be entertained by what I saw.

My challenge, especially to teens, is to care more about what's happening in this film as a whole and less about the teenage romance of Katniss and Peeta that develops during the games.

Living under dog rule

When you are a dog owner, you start to notice a shift in the hierarchy of your home.

At first it's hardly noticeable. But then you start to notice you are no longer the master of your home. Slowly but surely the dog starts to take over.

In case you have a hard time noticing when exactly that moment has arrived, here are a few clues.

First, you jump to your feet every time the dog sits next to the door. You might think you have trained the dog to do this to let you know it's time for them to go out but they've really trained you.

How many times have you stopped what you were doing to take the dog out to find yourself standing outside for 20 minutes while your dog takes a nice stroll around the yard sniffing things? And, I might add, how many times has this happened in the rain? Sometimes it's the one on our end of the leash being taken for the walk.

Another sign the dogs have taken over your house

BECCA OWSLEY

I have rushed home from work, stood outside for the before-mentioned 20 minutes waiting for them to find the perfect spot to go to the bathroom, rushed inside to change and hurried off to an event that I, more than likely, showed up late for because of the dogs.

Meal time can be another clue to the canine take over. Dogs sit and stare at each morsel of food as their eyes follow your fork from your plate to your mouth. Eventually this leads to you tossing them something from your meal. This is especially true of French fries.

Your spending habits also change to the canine demands. I've often looked down at the checkout line at the grocery and noticed half of my purchase is for the dogs. Food, treats, bones, dog shampoo, peanut butter and a variety of other items usually sit mixed with my grocery needs.

They also can pull off the pitiful look. This is their trick to get you to do anything they want you to. This includes crawling around on the floor looking for the favorite toy, Mr. Shark, they lost in the first place.

You also notice while you have a full size couch in your living room, you are sitting on a small chair or on the floor while the dogs stretch out on the couch. And, if you happen to have gotten to the couch first, you are sat on or pushed to the edge as the dog takes up the most comfy spot.

But the biggest sign that a dog has taken over your home happens at bedtime. This is the most cunning part of the take over. You go to bed and the dogs are obediently at the foot of the bed until you fall asleep. At some point you wake up in the middle of the night on the very edge of the bed with little cover while a large Labrador lies restfully on his back, sideways across the middle of your bed stretched out as much as he can.

At that point, you have ceased to be the master of your home and have totally given over to canine rule.

Some might ask why dog owners allow our homes to be completely taken over. And at first we might admit we have no idea, but upon further thought there are reasons we put up with the craziness of our dogs.

Their sweet devotion is unmatched, they are the best things to hug at the end of a hard day, most of the time they listen to everything you say without talking back to you, they can be absolutely hilarious and they're just so darn cute.

Yes, if you asked me who rules my home, I would probably have to honestly answer Duke the Corgi is in charge and Boo the Chocolate Labrador is his second in command. I'm not totally sure if I even come in third.

PRESCRIPTIONS: Incinerator used to dispose of medication the city and police department and was supported financially by the Elizabethtown Lions Club and AM Rotary.

Last fall, the mayor attended a program where Attorney General Jack Conway discussed the state's struggles with prescription drug abuse. Walker returned to Elizabethtown excited to implement some kind of program to address the problem.

"The easier we make it to destroy these drugs, the more people will participate," he said.

The Elizabethtown Police Department is at the intersection of South Mulberry and College streets and the disposal site is in the main entrance lobby and available to the public.

David J. Hale, U.S. Attorney for the Western District of Kentucky, was among those who attended Wednesday's ceremonial opening. Of the 52 counties he represents, Hale said Hardin County is "on the front edge" in installing a 24-hour site.

Hopkinsville Police Department has implemented a similar program, he said.

Community engagement is imperative to solving the statewide problem, Hale said, and awareness is increasing across the western half of the state.

"We hope it's a positive trend," he said.

EPD Chief Tracy Schiller said Kentucky leads the country in prescription drug abuse and a rapidly growing problem is prescription drug abuse among teenagers, who are lulled into a false sense of security because pills are "legal."

By experimenting with prescription medicine, many teens have become addicted and overdosed on pills, Schiller said.

"The impact can be devastating," Schiller said.

The police chief said he hopes local school districts and the community will collaborate with local law enforcement in their efforts to control the growing problem of prescription drug abuse.

Hardin Circuit Judge Kelly Mark Easton said local courts already plan to collaborate by requiring Drug Court participants who are being weaned off prescription medicine to dispose of the pills at EPD's site.

"This is going to be a very good development for drug issues in our courts system," Easton said.

Virgil Willoughby, EPD public information officer, said the site is monitored by a security camera, and all medication will be disposed of using an on-site incinerator.

Leaving unwanted medication in the home raises risk for abuse while disposing of them in a toilet or a sink contaminates drinking water and destroys ecosystems, according to an EPD news release.

"This is one of the biggest components of getting prescription drugs off the street," EPD Sgt. Tim Cleary said.

J.T. Alton Middle School, was honored as the newest recipient of the ExCEL award, given by WHAS-TV, LG&E and KU to teachers who exhibit "Excellence in Classroom and Educational Leadership."

Roberts' speech wasn't all punch lines. He spoke of how an illness at the age of 20 made him feel like his life hadn't been meaningful and he wanted to change it.

"That was the scariest feeling I've ever had in my entire life," he said.

He decided educating others would be the best way to do that. He knows now he doesn't have to wonder about what he will leave behind as his legacy, he told students in the audience.

"Every one of you know that your success or failure means something to me," he said.

Others who know Roberts spoke about the impact he has in the classroom. Garry King, a former principal at J.T. Alton, has known Roberts for several years. He talked to students about their impressions of Roberts and their reactions to being assigned to his classroom.

"I'll bet you that when you see his name on that schedule, you're happy about it," he said. They're excited because he makes his classroom a fun environment.

"As he makes that classroom fun, he sneaks in an education," King said.

Roberts received many gifts, including a scrapbook from his students, a Kindle Fire from coworkers and a performance of Israel Kamakawiwo'ole's version of "Over the Rainbow." The song is one of his favorites and one he often listened to with his grandfather, with whom he was very close.

A former student, Pam Poirier, also spoke about Roberts' impact on her as a student. Poirier now is in college, and she thanked him for making a difference in her life.

"After all these years, I remember Mr. Roberts," Poirier said.

Q What can I do about grinding my teeth?

A People who grind their teeth often do this and don't know it is happening. This falls under the heading of parafunctional habits. Teeth grinding can contribute to broken teeth, cracked teeth, TMJ or joint problems, and facial pain. It is very important if you suspect you are grinding to consult a dentist. The dentist can fabricate a professionally made bite guard that will help protect your teeth.

Q I exercise four days a week! Why am I not losing weight?

A There can be many reasons why you are not losing weight but are exercising regularly. The main cause would probably be your diet. Apparently, you are eating the same amount of calories that you are expending daily or you would be losing or gaining weight. Sometimes, what you eat is a factor, also. Medications can keep you from losing weight. Lack of sleep and hormone imbalances influence weight. Exercise intensity can make a difference. In other words, narrowing down what the problem is can take time but will be worth it. Hiring a Personal Trainer to help you determine what needs to be changed is your first step. If a dietician is needed, they can recommend where you go from there. The exercise is still making you healthier, whether or not you losing weight.

Q What are some things I can do to keep my spine healthy? (Submitted by Melissa R.)

A The number one cause of lost work days in the US is low back pain. This is mostly due to poor stabilization of the spine. Like anything else, your spine needs maintenance. Much like dental hygiene, spinal hygiene requires some attention on your part. Regular check-ups with your chiropractor are beneficial. Additionally, light exercises on an exercise ball and staying generally active are two other things you can do on your own to maintain your good spinal health.

Q Why is My Generic Drug so Expensive?

A This is a question that many customers are asking. It turns out that when A Branded Drug loses its patent, manufacturers apply to make the Generic Version. Sometimes only one manufacturer will be awarded an EXCLUSIVE contract to provide the Generic Drug for up to 180 days. A perfect example of this is with the Branded Drug LIPITOR. One manufacturer has the exclusive right to Generic Lipitor (Atorvastatin) until the end of May 2012. Because of this, the Generic price is only slightly lower than the Branded Lipitor price. This creates expensive cash prices, and many insurance companies refuse to pay for the Generic. By the end of May, there will be several manufacturers allowed to produce Generic Lipitor which will immediately reduce the COST. So remember, buying Generics will usually save a lot of money depending on whether or not there is an exclusive Manufacturer! If you have any questions about your Generics, please call our staff at Jeff's!

Q When should I start considering hearing aids for me?

A As soon as you feel there is a problem, you should be tested. If you find you have a loss and a hearing aid will help, hearing aids in most cases will slow the hearing loss down. Whereas, over a lifetime you will hear better for much longer.

Q What is the difference between an Open MRI and a "regular" MRI?

A For many people, the idea of having an MRI is a bit scary. Good news! There is no need to fear having an MRI. MRI, or magnetic resonance imaging, is a totally painless diagnostic exam that simply requires a person to lie on a table while the scanner takes pictures of the inside of the body. While an MRI can be noisy, the exam itself is as painless as taking a nap. For some people, being in a confined space is the actual cause of anxiety. "Regular" MRI scanners are closed tubes with openings at the ends. An Open MRI is open on all sides, not just at the ends, allowing for patients to see out into the room, which reduces feelings of claustrophobia. If claustrophobia is an issue for you, talk to your physician about the Open MRI at Lincoln Trail Diagnostics, and put aside any fears or concerns. We'll treat you like family!

Q How can I make my dark teeth more attractive?

A This is probably the most common question our patients have. It seems everyone wants a brighter smile, especially during the summertime. For good reason, a bright beautiful smile makes a wonderful impression and can help you feel good about yourself as well. The answer always depends on how the teeth are discolored and if there are any other concerns that detract from the smile. The most common treatment options include: ZOOM whitening or professional whitening trays, bonding, veneers and crowns (for more damaged teeth). Sometimes all that is needed is a professional teeth cleaning. Improving a smile always begins with an exam: so come in and see what we can do to make YOUR smile beautiful.

PROTECT CHILDREN FROM HEARING LOSS

Hearing loss among American adolescents is surging. So says a 2010 report published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, in which researchers found that 19.5 percent of children sampled between the ages of 12 to 19 in 2005 and 2006 had some hearing loss. That's a considerable increase from the 14.9 percent of children in the same age group who had some hearing loss between 1988 and 1994.

What's especially troubling about the report's findings is that once a person has hearing loss, their risk of progressive hearing loss as they age is greater. So even small hearing loss today can, over time, evolve into significant hearing loss. Much of this spike in hearing loss could be the result of frequent earbuds use, which are tiny electric speakers that commonly accompany personal MP3 players. Earbuds are convenient, but many fear that convenience could come at the cost of an individual's hearing, particularly for children, who are among the most frequent users of personal musical players and, consequently, earbuds. Concerned parents can protect their children's ears from hearing loss in a number of ways.

- Recognize symptoms. Symptoms of hearing loss include pain in the ears, buzzing or ringing in the ears and even trouble correctly hearing words. Should a child exhibit any of these symptoms, visit an audiologist as soon as possible.

- Reduce risks. Childhood noise risks are many, and it's up to parents to reduce a child's exposure to such risks. The American Academy of Audiology notes that some of the common childhood noise risks are concerts, sporting events, arcades, shop class, and even noisy toys. Avoid giving young children very noisy toys, and encourage them to keep the volume down when playing video games. When taking a child to a concert, avoid sitting too close to the stage, where the noise is often at its loudest.

- Promote hearing protection. Noise-induced hearing loss can occur whenever there is prolonged exposure to sounds louder than 85 decibels (dB). To put that in perspective, a hair dryer typically operates at 90 dB and an ambulance siren might be 130 dB. Encourage kids to wear proper hearing protection, including earplugs, whenever the noise levels are likely to exceed 85 dB, such as if they'll be attending noisy concerts or sporting events. Earplugs won't make it impossible to enjoy a concert, and they will provide the added protection kids need.

- Turn down the volume. Personal music players can reach great volumes, which can do significant damage. Encourage kids to turn down the volume when using personal music players. A good barometer is if kids can hear external sounds beyond their earbuds. If kids can't hear nearby conversation while listening to their personal music player, the volume is too loud.

- Aside from ear plugs, don't put anything in kids' ears. Don't remove wax or dirt from ears with fingers, cotton wool or cotton swabs. Nothing besides an ear plug should ever go into a person's ear, regardless of how old that person is.

Ear buds that typically come with personal music players can be very damaging to kids' ears if they do not keep the volume low.

Battle of the Bluegrass

Cultures clash in Commonwealth over Kentucky-Louisville meeting in Final Four

By COLIN FLY
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON — This Bluegrass State rivalry runs deep, and the divide is wide.

Just 70 miles apart, Lexington and Louisville are worlds apart when it comes to college basketball. Come Saturday when the Cardinals and Wildcats meet at the Final Four in New Orleans, a berth in the national title game is just the beginning.

Here, the game is likened to a civil war.

Pick a side: Wildcats or Cardinals. Rupp's Runts or the Doctors of Dunk. Dan Issel or Wes Unseld. John Calipari or Rick Pitino.

"If the excitement and frenzy and turbulence that's been stirred up in Kentucky this week could be harnessed, we could solve our energy crisis," Kentucky Sen. Mitch McConnell said on the Senate floor. "Basketball fans from Kentucky have been waiting their whole lives for this game."

This is the grudge match to end them all.

It's the fifth time the schools will meet in the NCAA tournament — the two sides have split the four previous meetings — and it pits Louisville coach Pitino against one-time friend and now frosty foe Calipari. Not to mention Kentucky freshmen phenoms Anthony

Davis and Michael Kidd-Gilchrist, who have been steady in taking the Wildcats to the top, versus a ragtag flock of Cardinals who've won eight straight with a rotating cast of mostly unknowns such as Peyton Siva and Gorgui Dieng.

"It's not about (Pitino) or I; it's about these players," said Calipari, who's in his second consecutive Final Four still searching for the national title that's eluded him. "Hopefully we both have our teams ready to play, and I think we will, and we'll go at it."

The Cardinals (30-9) lost this season's matchup to the Wildcats (36-2), 69-62 on Dec. 31.

Even though there is much more on the line Saturday, it will be difficult for the game to be much more intense.

"There's going to be so much pressure on the players," former Louisville forward Earl Clark said. "It's going to go down in history. Kentucky is the No. 1 team, and Louisville is like the Cinderella of the tournament."

Kentucky blue dominates most of the state of more than 4.3 million basketball-crazed fans, surrounding the outnumbered Cardinals fans who have fortified a stronghold in the state's largest city.

Reds leaning toward closer-by-committee

The Associated Press

GOODYEAR, Ariz. — One week before the season opener, Cincinnati Reds manager Dusty Baker is leaning toward a closer-by-committee approach to replace Ryan Madson.

The Reds learned last weekend that Madson has a torn ligament in his pitching elbow and will need reconstructive surgery, ending his season. There's no one else on the roster with significant experience in the role.

Left-handed setup man Sean Marshall is the best alternative, but has never been a full-time closer. Baker wants to see how he handles pitching a full inning several days in a row.

"I have to talk to the guys," Baker said. "I have to work it. You just don't throw somebody in that role. A closer ideally can go three or four days in a row, then might not get work for a week. There aren't too many guys out there that have gone three or four days in a row. I've been told about Marshall (that) you try to stay away from him three days in a row."

It's a puzzle that is getting more complicated each day.

By JENNA FRYER

CONCORD, N.C. — Dale Earnhardt Jr. won a career-high six races in 2004 and mounted a decent challenge for the championship.

He's not had a year like that since, not even close. But five races into the season, he feels as good as he did eight years ago.

"I feel the best I've felt, personally, confidence-wise, as I have in a long time. Probably since 2004, when I was winning all them races," Earnhardt said Wednesday at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Earnhardt goes into Sunday's race at Martinsville Speedway mired in a 134-race losing streak that dates back to 2008, his first season with Hendrick Motorsports. He had a solid shot at getting back to Victory Lane a year ago at Martinsville, but wound up second to Kevin Harvick that left Earnhardt's fans feeling a little flat.

Earnhardt led 17 laps and was out front when Harvick passed him four laps from the finish. Earnhardt resisted any urge to try to knock Harvick out of

AUTO RACING

Smith will change Bristol Speedway

The Associated Press

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Bristol Motor Speedway owner Bruton Smith said he'll make changes to the track after spending a week reviewing input from fans.

Smith did not reveal what exactly he'll do to the track, but said an announcement could come in about two weeks.

"The race fans have spoken," Smith said Wednesday. "We had input that included a wide range of opinions. But the majority we heard from said they wanted to see changes made. The question we wanted to answer as quickly as possible was 'Is something going to be done?'" The answer to that is 'yes.' We will have the details in two weeks as to what that 'something' is."

Fans have clamored for him to return it to how it was before a 2007 reconfiguration added variable banking in the corners. It opened up lanes for two-and-three wide racing, and fans preferred tight lines that lent to bumping and banging.

Ohio State hoops still in shadow of goal posts

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Spring football practice began Wednesday as Ohio State’s basketball team prepared for its second trip to the Final Four in the last six years.

Perfect symmetry there. The basketball team is usually playing in the shadow of goal posts on the Ohio State campus, where fans love to pack the football stadium and watch the band spell out “Ohio” in script at halftime. Football is the overriding talk of the town, even when it involves the program’s recent scandals.

In the last few months, the city has been consumed by the hiring of Urban Meyer to resurrect a program that’s banned from bowl eligibility for 2012.

All-America forward Jared Sullinger knows that even during March, most Ohio State fans would rather talk about touchdowns than 3s.

“We’re never going to beat Coach Urban Meyer,” Sullinger said. “He brought the most buzz to Columbus, Ohio, in a long time.”

Lately, the basketball team is generating a little of its own.

The Buckeyes play Kansas in the national semifinals Saturday night. They won their only national basketball title in 1960, part of a run of three straight trips to the title game.

For at least one week, hoops is grabbing its share of the attention around town, even though Buckeye sports websites still count down the number of days until the annual football game against Michigan.

“The buzz we brought, being known not only as a football school but as a basketball school, is great,” Sullinger said. “But at the same time, we don’t want the train to stop at this particular moment. Hopefully we can keep it rolling.”

The Final Four timing is perfect for a school still recovering from last fall.

The football program brought the school notoriety last season. Coach Jim Tressel was forced out in May for lying about his players breaking NCAA rules. The team went 6-7 and dropped its last four games, including a loss to Florida in the Gator Bowl. The program was banned from a bowl in 2012.

It was only the football team’s second losing season since 1988. Meyer was hired in November, overshadowing the start of basketball season on campus.

No surprise. Even when the Buckeyes were on top of college basketball in the early 1960s, the basketball team still took a seat in the second row.

“Maybe during our period we elevated it a little bit, but I think everybody knows the case is that football is predominant there,” former Buckeye basketball star Jerry Lucas said in a phone interview Wednesday.

Lucas, a member of the Ohio State teams that won the national championship in 1960 and lost to Cincinnati in the 1961 and 1962 title games, thinks football has never loosened its grip on the campus.

“Obviously, there’s a lot more interest at Duke in basketball,” Lucas said. “Football at Duke hasn’t been very successful. I think it’s the fact that historically Ohio State has been very successful in football. Basketball is kind of a Johnny-come-lately.”

It’s a fact that every basketball coach has to accept.

“I’ve always felt we could have the best of both at Ohio State,” coach Thad Matta said. “I know with all the trials and tribulations that have gone on with football over the past year, I’m elated for the university probably most importantly that we’ve got some great things happening. With coach Meyer coming in, things are really stepping up in that regard.

“For (basketball), over the course of the last few years, this program has identified itself. I’ve always said this: There is no greater feeling than being on the field when 105,000 people are cheering for the Buckeyes to come out and you’ve got a couple recruits with you.

“That is the ultimate right there.”

Matta has returned the basketball program to national prominence. The Buckeyes hadn’t reached the Final Four since 1999 when he took over. He led them to the Final Four in 2007, when they beat Georgetown before losing the title game to Florida.

Reaching another Final Four should help the program get a little bit more of its own identity.

“It kind of puts a spotlight on the program because we’re the last four teams playing in the NCAA Tournament,” Sullinger said. “I know recruits want to win. That was the biggest thing for me.

“For fans, hopefully people don’t say we’re a football school — just a football school. Now they can switch that and say we’re a basketball school and a football school.”

Could Ohio State be known just as much for basketball as football?

“I probably doubt that will happen,” Sullinger said.

Ohio University trying to find money to keep Groce

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Another day passed Wednesday without a hire in the search for a replacement for Bruce Weber at Illinois, but Ohio University said it’s trying to come up with enough money to see if top Illini target John Groce might stay with the Bobcats.

Illinois athletic director Mike Thomas announced the hiring Wednesday morning of a new women’s coach, Matt Bollant from Wisconsin-Green Bay, but declined to say much at all about the search for a men’s coach. University spokesman Kent Brown said by late afternoon that no news would be coming Wednesday.

“No change from yesterday or day before,” Brown said. “As Mike stated this morning, the process continues to move and when we’re ready to make an announcement, we’ll have one.”

Ohio spokesman Drew Wiseman said administrators there had started to try to put together money for a potential raise for Groce to try to keep him at Ohio. He wasn’t sure where the money might come from or even whether administrators would make a firm offer.

“I certainly have no idea when the decision will be made,” he said.

Kansas State embarks on search for new hoops coach

John Currie knows he faces the biggest task of his professional career in replacing Frank Martin, the now-former basketball coach of Kansas State whose bigger-than-life aura and on-court success made the Wildcats relevant again.

It’s a task the third-year athletic director plans to tackle quietly.

“The opportunity that exists here is tremendous. We have the resources to enable our next coach to build a sustainable, winning basketball program,” Currie said earlier this week. “We have everything a coach needs to win.”

Much of that is thanks to Martin, who stepped in after Bob Huggins hastily departed for West Virginia after just one season. Martin managed to hold together a highly touted recruiting class that included Michael Beasley, and eventually reeled off five consecutive 20-win seasons.

The Wildcats finished 22-11 this season, falling to Syracuse in the third round of the NCAA Tournament, before Martin left this week to take over the rebuilding job at South Carolina.

Minnesota, Stanford meet in NIT championship game

NEW YORK — Minnesota coach Tubby Smith and Stanford’s Johnny Dawkins ran into each other a few times recruiting Andre Hollins.

The point guard from Memphis, Tenn., chose the Golden Gophers, and he’s playing his best basketball deep into his freshman season, leading an injury-riddled team to the title game of the NIT — against the Cardinal. The schools face off tonight at Madison Square Garden.

“We want the ball in his hands because he’s making very good decisions with it,” Smith said.

For third-seeded Stanford, there will be plenty of familiarity today, too. The Cardinal played in the Garden in November, reaching the final of the NIT Season Tip-Off. They led Syracuse, which would go on to earn a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament, by six points with about 4½ minutes left.

But the Orange turned up the pressure, ending the game on a 15-3 run to win 69-63. Stanford saw convincing evidence in Tuesday’s semifinal that it’s come a long way since then, when the Cardinal wasted a big lead against Massachusetts but rallied to win.

“The same run was made, and we didn’t respond the way we needed to,” Dawkins said of the Syracuse game. “To see our growth in our young players that we were able to respond.”

BLUEGRASS: in state of hoops hysteria

The fan bases are about as different as they can be, and Pitino is one of the few who knows what it’s like on both sides of the aisle.

He coached Kentucky for eight years, bringing the Wildcats back to the pinnacle of greatness with an NCAA title in ’96. He’s been at Louisville for the last 11 years and is heading to his second Final Four with the Cardinals.

“It’s two different entities, really, it’s two rabid fan bases,” Pitino said.

That was oh so clear this week when two senior citizens duked it out at a Georgetown dialysis clinic.

A 68-year-old Kentucky fan and 71-year-old Louisville fan were arguing Monday about who will win Saturday’s game when the discussion quickly got out of hand. Georgetown police Lt. Robert Swanigan said the Kentucky fan flipped off the Louisville fan, prompting the Cardinals fan to punch him in the face. Though police were called, Swanigan said the Kentucky fan declined to file charges.

The fight likely wouldn’t surprise Calipari, who lovingly compares Wildcats fans to piranhas — yes, the flesh-eating fish.

“If you’re going to attack Kentucky, just be right,” Calipari said of a fan base that feeds off every little bit of information about his school and dissects every game tape three times. “I’m just telling you: piranha — wahp-wahp-wahp-wahp-wahp. They’ll come and eat your yard, your house. These people are nuts.”

And Cardinals’ fans enjoy poking fun at them.

On Twitter and message boards, they joke how Kentucky fans turn Cats into two words — Ca-yuts. One of Big Blue Nation’s favorite retorts? Loserville.

Pitino jokes many marriages in the state fail because they have a Louisville woman marrying a Kentucky man.

Nick Fenton and his wife, Christi, are working through their differences in Louisville. Fenton said they fly a “House Divided” flag in their front yard with the two schools’ logos displayed.

“Her family is all Cards fans, so they brainwashed her,” said Fenton, who usually reserves the rhetoric for one week a year. “This Final Four game, though, it’s going to be pretty wild.”

It took the governor to first get the two schools together on an annual basis.

Kentucky never scheduled in-state schools under coach Adolph Rupp, and former assistant Joe B. Hall dutifully followed suit when he took over as coach. Gov. John Y. Brown stepped in following their matchup in the 1983 NCAA Mideast Regional final known around the state as The Dream Game. Louisville beat Kentucky in overtime in Knoxville, Tenn., in the teams’ first meeting since 1959.

“It created a lot of animosity and strong feelings toward each other, but at the same time I felt like the taxpayers were entitled to see the competition between two of the nation’s premier programs,” Brown said. “If you ask either school what the No. 1 game on the schedule both in basketball and football, they’ll say it’s the rival school.

“They have to live in shame, whichever one loses.”

Kentucky vs. Louisville is a matchup of cultural divide that’s steeped in history with nine combined titles between the two schools, the same number as the more publicized North Carolina-Duke rivalry.

Former Kentucky guard and No. 1 NBA draft pick John Wall remembers the wild scene before the only rivalry game he played in 2010 more than the contest itself.

“I didn’t think it was that big until we played them. There was about to be a big brawl at the beginning of the game. Technicals both ways,” said Wall, star guard for the Washington Wizards. “All you hear from the fans is, ‘Don’t lose to the Cardinals. Whatever happens, Big Blue Nation better not lose to Louisville.’”

For the most part, Kentucky fans have gotten their wish — the Wildcats are 18-11 since the annual game started in 1983-84 to go along with seven national titles and 15 Final Four appearances. Louisville has two titles and is making its ninth appearance in the national semifinals.

The histories of the programs highlight their differences in style and their efforts to keep up with each other.

Louisville’s decision to build the $238 million KFC Yum! Center downtown hastened Lexington’s plans for a $150 million renovation of 36-year-old Rupp Arena. And both schools built multimillion dollar practice facilities in the past few years.

Louisville signed its first black players in 1962 with a class that included Wade Houston, Eddie Whitehead and Sam Smith with little fanfare and later inked greats like Unseld and Darrell Griffith.

Kentucky was famously slower to integrate.

Rupp’s all-white team lost to Texas Western, which started five black players, in the 1966 NCAA final popularized by the movie “Glory Road” and didn’t break the color barrier until 1969 when Rupp signed Tom Payne of Louisville who spent a year in Lexington before entering the NBA draft.

When the dunk was reinstated in the college game for the 1976-77 season, Louisville and coach Denny Crum embraced attacking the rim, beginning with Griffith, who earned the moniker

Crum won titles in 1980 and ‘86. His high-flying players at Freedom Hall were known as the Doctors of Dunk who helped popularize the high five and helped usher in a new age of college basketball, including a win in The Dream Game in 1983.

Kentucky’s style bordered on a business-like approach under Hall. Hall’s ‘78 squad was so thoroughly expected to win the national title that when they did, it’s remembered as “The Season Without Celebration.” Hall coached through 1985 before Eddie Sutton’s unsuccessful run ended in NCAA violations.

It was Pitino who helped usher Kentucky back to the title path with three Final Four appearances and a championship in 1996.

That group, known as The Untouchables, featured nine NBA players and six first-round picks. Kentucky heads to New Orleans with a team loaded with talent whereas Louisville was a big surprise to get to the Final Four once again. It makes Saturday’s game another historic showdown.

Former Kentucky forward Josh Harrellson summed it up: “I think everybody in the world is going to be watching.”

Weary Venus loses at Key Biscayne

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Venus Williams sagged in the wooden changeover chair as if it were a cushy recliner, her head tilted back, her tank on empty.

She rose slowly to play the final two games and lost both, but grinned as she walked to the exit, perhaps because she was headed for a well-deserved rest.

Weary after winning three consecutive three-set matches, Williams was eliminated Wednesday by Agnieszka Radwanska in the quarterfinals of the Sony Ericsson Open, 6-4, 6-1.

“It was disappointing not to be able to feel my best today,” Williams said. “I was able to keep it close in the first set and try different strategies, but it was definitely a mental battle, and today I didn’t conquer the mental part of it.”

Top-ranked Victoria Azarenka lost for the first time this year when she was beaten by Marion Bartoli 6-3, 6-3.

Azarenka had won 26 consecutive matches, a streak that dated to the beginning of 2012. Her start was the best on the women’s tour since Martina Hingis went 37-0 to begin 1997.

The seventh-seeded Bartoli will play No. 5 Radwanska in the semifinals today. The other match will be between No. 2 Maria Sharapova and No. 4 Caroline Wozniacki.

Williams’ serve lacked its usual velocity, and by the final game she wasn’t even chasing shots in the corner. The tournament was her first since the U.S. Open last August, where she withdrew after being diagnosed with a fatigue-causing autoimmune disease.

“It has been a great tournament,” she said. “Obviously I’m disappointed and would have liked to have gone further, but it’s a great start.”

Eager to keep points short in the 85-degree sunshine, Williams charged the net often but frequently had to lunge for shots. She committed 38 unforced errors to 10 for Radwanska, and won only five of 26 points on her second serve.

“It was pretty hot out there,” Radwanska said. “Maybe that was why she didn’t look that good.”

In the men’s quarterfinals, 2009 champion Andy Murray overcame an upset stomach and early deficit to beat ninth-seeded Janko Tipsarevic 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Two Williamses were eliminated in 18 hours. Younger sister

Serena lost Tuesday night to Wozniacki.

Venus needed a wild card to enter the tournament because she’s ranked 134th. The three-time Olympian’s goal has been improve her ranking enough to qualify for the London Games, and she’s projected to climb next week back into the top 90.

In the past, the cutoff for making the Olympics has been around 68th. Teams will be chosen based on rankings in early June.

Radwanska, ranked a career-best No. 4, advanced to the Key Biscayne semifinals for the first time. She’s 0-4 this year against top-ranked Victoria Azarenka and 24-0 against everyone else.

She beat Williams in 2006 but had since lost five consecutive meetings.

“Of course she had some time off last couple of months,” Radwanska said. “But she’s still a great player. I really had to play very well today to beat her.”

Williams overcame a match point in the third round against Aleksandra Wozniak on Sunday night, and said she was up until 4 a.m. afterward. She recovered to beat No. 15-seeded Ana Ivanovic on Monday.

Williams said her ailment requires her to save all her energy for tennis, but she strayed from that approach with a day off Tuesday.

“I should have rested more probably,” Williams said. “After a while you start to feel like maybe everything’s behind you. I definitely learned maybe if you’re doing something right, don’t change it.”

Her energy reserve appeared low from the start of the quarter-final, and she lost the first seven points. Radwanska took advantage of Williams’ lethargy by hitting several drop shots for winners and pouncing on weak second serves.

When Williams had a chance at an easy overhead, she walked up to the ball flat-footed. Facing break point early in the second set, she mustered only a 72-mph first serve, well below her norm of 110 or more.

Williams lost the final six points, dumped her last shot into the net and began looking ahead to the clay-court season. She plans to play next week at Charleston, S.C.

“I’ve definitely learned a lot about ways maybe I could prepare during the tournament,” she said.

NFL

Postseason OT adopted for regular season

By BARRY WILNER
AP Pro Football Writer

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Even though the NFL’s new rule for postseason overtime has never come into play, it’s being expanded for the regular season, too.

NFL owners passed the play-off overtime rule for the regular schedule Wednesday. All games that go into overtime now can’t end on a field goal on the first possession.

The opposing team must get one series, and if it also kicks a field goal, the extra period continues. Of course, if it fails to score it loses, and if it gets a touchdown, it wins.

The rule has not been a factor since it was instituted in 2010, with only two playoff games going to overtime. One ended on the first play, Tim Tebow’s 80-yard touchdown pass to Demaryius Thomas for a Denver victory over Pittsburgh. The other had several possessions for each team before the Giants beat the 49ers in the NFC title game this season.

The vote on adopting the new overtime rule was 30-2.

Owners also have given the replay official permission to review turnovers just as he reviews all scoring plays.

Other rules changes: a team will lose a down for illegally kicking a loose ball; too many men on the field becomes a dead ball foul; and a player receiving a crackback block is now considered a defenseless player and the hit will result in a 15-yard penalty.

Not passed were proposals to have the booth official handle video reviews rather than the referee, and outlawing the horse-collar tackle made on quarterbacks in the pocket.

Given the NFL’s concern with player safety, the failure to extend the horse-collar rule seemed surprising. But competition committee chairman Rich McKay said the ownership “didn’t think this can impact on player safety.”

“The rule was developed for the open field tackle when a defender has the chance to do something else (in making the tackle),” he said. “He’s also able to use the runner’s momentum against him. We didn’t think that applied to the pocket, didn’t see the injury risk.”

Several bylaw changes were tabled until the league meetings in May, including expanding preseason rosters to 90, designating one player suffering a major injury before Week 2 of the season as eligible to return from injured reserve, and moving the trading deadline back two weeks to after Week 8.

McKay expects them to pass at the next meetings in Atlanta.

“There were good ideas and suggestions, no resistance,” he said. “We’ll work on the language.”

Commissioner Roger Goodell reiterated the league’s strong stance against non-contract bonuses such as the New Orleans Saints’ bounty program that got coach Sean Payton suspended for one year and cost New Orleans a $500,000 fine and two second-round draft choice. Goodell said the league will not allow any cash payments between players, whether the clubs are involved or not.

“It’s not permissible and we are going to take that out of the game,” he said.

Goodell expects to speak with players’ union head DeMaurice Smith before the end of the week and hopes to have the NFLPA’s recommendations on punishment for players involved in the bounties by then or soon after. The league will be scheduling additional hearings in the investigation.

Also:

■ The NFL will not be awarding the 2016 Super Bowl, its 50th, to any city this year. Goodell said he expects many bidders for the game.

“It’s an important game for us,” he said. “We’re looking at plans to make it spectacular.”

There’s been speculation the league was hoping a suitable stadium would be in place in Los Angeles by 2016. The first Super Bowl was played in the LA Coliseum.

■ The league is prepared to make an agreement with the union on HGH testing if a population study is the only thing standing in the way.

■ The 18-game schedule has not been discussed and the NFL wants to go through a full cycle of the offseason schedule that came with the new collective bargaining agreement before reviewing the subject.

■ No consensus has been reached in the medical community on the value of having an independent neurologist on the sidelines during games. Discussions likely will continue.

Kentucky ends best season in school history

UK finishes with 28-7 record

By COLIN FLY
AP Sports Writer

One of Kentucky’s best seasons in history ended with an exit to a vastly more experienced Connecticut squad.

While the Wildcats won’t be going to the Final Four, they’re gaining valuable knowledge about what it takes to get there.

Kentucky (28-7) got off to a record start, won the Southeastern Conference regular-season championship and received a No. 2 seed in the NCAA Tournament, making it to the Kingston Regional final before being bounced by the Huskies, 80-65 on Tuesday night.

“I think it’s important to figure out can you come back with more enthusiasm, can you come back with more determination, can you continue to help the program progress to a point where we can get to a Final Four, where we can win a national championship and it’s hard,” Kentucky coach Matthew Mitchell said. “It’s hard to get to this round and they’ve just been here so many times and it’s difficult but I think we just need to stay at it, we need to keep showing up and one of these days we’ll punch through.”

Mitchell’s squad has been on the right track since he took over five seasons ago.

Kentucky reached the regional finals for the second time under Mitchell in three years and just the third in history, joining the 1982 squad that was also a two seed in the tournament.

This year, the Wildcats started 21-2 and won an SEC regular-season title for the first time thanks to its tenacious, risk-taking pressure defense that was dubbed “40 minutes of dread.” They forced 26.9 turnovers per game, a school record.

The group will lose starting guards Keyla Snowden and Amber Smith from a team that beat six opponents ranked in the Top 25, but SEC Player of the Year A’dia Mathies will be back for her senior year and SEC Freshman of the Year Bria Goss will be expected to be the second part of next year’s one-two offensive punch.

California transfer DeNesha

Stallworth also will be eligible to go along with 11 returning players.

Add Mitchell back at the helm and Kentucky will likely enter next season as the conference favorite — not Tennessee.

“The program looks a lot different with (the seniors) walking out of the door then it looked with them walking into the door,” said Mitchell, the SEC Coach of the Year. “I don’t know, really, if people were really being honest here if they thought what’s happened now was really possible. We just historically had one of the worst winning percentages in our conference, we just don’t have a lot of tradition ... now these kids have come in and really poured their heart and soul into the program and we at least have a fighting chance to have a good program and to be considered a program that would be nationally recognized.”

This scrappy squad battled back from an early 9-0 hole against Connecticut and trailed 48-47 in the second half before the Huskies ran away late with a 21-4 run.

“If you want to blame somebody for this one, you can credit Connecticut’s good play and you can blame me for it,” Mitchell said. “I thought our team gave a really, really strong effort.”

The Wildcats will need to work on their perimeter shooting to move even farther in the tournament. After swarming SEC opponents most of the year, teams adjusted with a sagging defense that dared Kentucky to take jump shots. Too often they fell short both down the stretch of the season and finally against the Huskies.

“We stopped hitting our shots, they were hitting their shots and we never got it really going,” Goss said. “I felt like that was the turning point of the game.”

But certainly not in the program. Expectations will grow for Mitchell and the Wildcats that this group will finally make a Final Four — maybe even next year in New Orleans.

“I feel like we’ve done a wonderful job,” sophomore Samarie Walker said. “It’s very disappointing, but we have Bria returning, A’dia and then DeNesha Stallworth will be able to play next year so I feel like we’ll be really good again.”

Els not feeling pressure to win in Houston

By CHRIS DUNCAN
AP Sports Writer

HUMBLE, Texas — Ernie Els is approaching the Houston Open like any other tournament, and not worrying about the bigger prize at stake.

Els must win this week to qualify for next week’s Masters and avoid missing the season’s first major for the first time since 1993. But he’ll consider winning at Redstone a bonus, and is more focused on building on the strong start to his year.

“You can’t go into a week putting pressure on yourself to win to get into another week,” Els said Wednesday. “I just want to have a good week. If I can win, obviously, that would be absolutely wonderful. But my goal here is not to get into the Masters, it’s to play the Shell Houston Open as good as I can.

“If I get into the Masters, that’s great. If I don’t, then I’ve had many Masters that I can look back at, and I’ll get back in there next year.”

The three-time major winner had his chances in recent weeks, earning top-five finishes at Tampa and Bay Hill. But he missed crucial short putts late in both tournaments and seems resigned to the reality that he won’t be at Augusta next week.

“It’ll be a very weird feeling,” Els said. “Since I’ve been a professional at this level, I’ve played at the Masters, so it’ll be a very weird feeling not to be there. I’ll miss it.”

The Masters could still offer a special invitation to Els, like tournament officials did for Greg Norman in 2002. Ryo Ishikawa, a nine-time winner on the Japan Golf Tour, has a special invitation this year.

Els isn’t expecting a call between now and Sunday, when the Masters field will be set.

“It is an invitational event,” he said, “and they have their reasons to invite somebody or not, and that’s the sad part. I’ll probably miss it for the first time in 18 or 19 years. My streak will come to an end, unfortunately.

“I can’t blame the Masters people for not inviting me. I’ve put myself in this position by not playing very well.”

Phil Mickelson is the defending champion in Houston, and the field also includes local favorite Fred Couples and international stars Lee Westwood, Pádraig Harrington and Graeme McDowell, the runner-up to Tiger Woods at Bay Hill last week.

The tournament became the run-up event to the Masters in 2007, and organizers have embraced the distinction. The course is manicured to simulate conditions at Augusta, with light rough, fairways mowed toward the tees, shaved mounds and slick greens.

The setup has generated mostly positive feedback among the pros, particularly among international players. This year, the field has 40 players representing 17 countries outside of the United States, both tournament records.

“They really go the extra mile with the details,” said McDowell, playing here for the first time since 2006. “It’s a nice test, without being too difficult.”

Mickelson has played here every year since 2008 and he tied for 35th in 2010, when he won his third Masters.

Wainwright struggles in 9-5 win

The Associated Press

Adam Wainwright struggled for 4 2/3 innings in his final tuneup against big league hitters as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Detroit Tigers, 9-5 on Wednesday.

Wainwright, coming off reconstructive surgery on his right elbow that sidelined him for the entire 2011 season, had pitched 16 innings without allowing an earned run this spring before the Tigers broke through.

Wainwright allowed four runs, three earned, on six hits and a walk. His final outing before opening day is expected to be against Cardinals minor leaguers.

Jhonny Peralta broke a scoreless tie with an RBI single in the third. Andy Dirks later hit a two-run single.

TWINS 11, PHILLIES 7. Justin Morneau extended his recent resurgence at the plate, going 3-for-4 with a two-run homer in Minnesota's win over Philadelphia.

Morneau has spent time at designated hitter the last week, trying to recapture his swing. He's also left the door open for a permanent shift away from first base. It's working. The 2006 AL MVP is 7-for-14 in his last four games with a double and three home runs after a slow spring start.

The outburst came at the expense of Phillies starter Vance Worley, who gave up 11 runs — five earned — on 11 hits in four innings.

Francisco Liriano gave up two runs and eight hits in four innings for Minnesota. Luke Hughes, one of the infielders vying for a spot and waiting to see where Morneau plays, went 2-for-4 with a three-run homer, his team-leading fifth.

YANKEES 5, BRAVES 5, 10 INNINGS. Jason Heyward hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning and Brandon Beachy pitched a spring-high six solid innings as Atlanta and New York played to a 10-inning tie.

Yankees starter Hiroki Kuroda had his longest outing, too, allowing two runs in seven innings. He struck out six.

Eric Chavez had three hits with a double and three RBIs for New York, boosting his average to .235.

Heyward lifted his average to .205 with two hits. Freddie Freeman also homered for Atlanta.

The Yankees led 5-3 going into the ninth, but Freeman walked and Heyward homered to deep right off George Kontos.

ASTROS 6, MARLINS 3. Lucas Harrell gave up an unearned run in five innings to pitch Houston past Miami.

Making a late bid for a spot in the Astros' rotation, Harrell scattered three hits and walked none in his first start of the spring.

Marlins starter Carlos Zambrano walked five in four innings.

Chris Johnson had two hits for the Astros and Brian Bogusevic drove in two runs with a single off Zambrano.

Houston shortstop Jed Lowrie left the game in the third inning with a sprained right thumb after getting picked off second base. X-rays were negative.

BLUE JAYS 9, ORIOLES 3. Eric Thames hit a two-run double and Toronto tagged Dana Eveland, then roughed up Alfredo Simon in beating Baltimore.

Eveland allowed three runs and six hits in four innings.

Simon, pitching for the first time in 10 days since leaving a game with a pulled groin, gave up three runs and two hits in the fifth, one scoring on a wild pitch. He yielded three more runs in the fourth on four hits, including Chris Woodward's double.

NATIONALS 3, METS 2. Jordan Zimmermann pitched six shutout innings, Jayson Werth hit his fourth home run of the spring and Washington beat the New York Mets.

Werth led off the fourth with a shot over the left-field wall to help back Zimmermann's best start of the spring. The right-hander allowed two hits, struck out two and didn't walk a batter.

Mets starter Jon Niese gave up two runs on five hits and a walk in six innings. He struck out six.

New York scored in the seventh when Lucas Duda tripled to drive in Jason Bay, who returned to the lineup after sitting out two games with a bruised hand when he was hit by a pitch Sunday against the Nationals.

CUBS 2, INDIANS 0. Jeff Samardzija rebounded from a subpar effort in his previous start to give up three hits in six sharp innings as Chicago held on for a victory over Cleveland.

The right-hander gave up seven runs on 10 hits in his last start against Colorado on March 23.

Samardzija also hit a triple to lead off the fifth inning but was stranded.

The Cubs scored two runs on four hits in the sixth. Bryan LaHair and Joe Mather each drove in a run against Cleveland starter Josh Tomlin.

Leadoff man Jason Kipnis had two of the Indians' five hits, including a double.

REDS 5, ANGELS 4. Dan Haren and Bronson Arroyo made solid starts, and Ryan Ludwick's two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning gave Cincinnati a victory over Los Angeles.

Haren threw 90 pitches in 5 2/3 innings for the Angels, allowing two runs and nine hits. He struck out two.

Arroyo worked six innings, his longest performance of the spring. He allowed two runs and four hits, including Vernon Wells' third homer.

Ludwick, trying to win playing time in left field, homered in the ninth off Loek Van Mil, who also walked Chris Heisey.

Jason Istringhausen, looking to win a bullpen job with the Angels, pitched a scoreless inning.

GIANTS 4, DODGERS 1. Brandon Crawford and Nate Schierholtz homered to help San Francisco beat Los Angeles.

Crawford hit a solo drive off Nathan Eovaldi in the second inning. Schierholtz belted a two-run shot to left in the eighth.

Yusmeiro Petit allowed four hits in five scoreless innings for the Giants. The right-hander struck out four and walked one.

Eovaldi gave up two runs and three hits in five innings. James Loney hit an RBI double for the Dodgers.

BREWERS 7, DIAMONDBACKS 1. Zack Greinke scattered five hits over seven innings, doubled and drove in a run to lead Milwaukee over Arizona.

Jonathan Lucroy, who agreed to a five-year contract Tuesday, added three hits including a double and his second spring home run. He also drove in three runs for Milwaukee.

Greinke gave up one run, walked one and struck out eight. His ERA ticked up to 0.93.

Arizona starter Wade Miley allowed seven runs and 10 hits in 4 2/3 innings. Seven of those hits came in succession during the Brewers' six-run fifth.

PADRES 13, WHITE SOX (SS) 2. Yonder Alonso, Chase Headley and Andy Parrino homered to lead San Diego past a Chicago split squad.

Headley hit a two-run drive for his third homer of the spring. He also had a two-run double.

Parrino's two-run shot was his fourth homer, and Alonso's solo drive was his first of the spring.

Padres starter Edinson Volquez gave up two runs and five hits in seven innings.

White Sox starter Dylan Axelrod, a candidate for the bullpen, allowed three runs and eight hits in 5 2/3 innings.

ROCKIES 8, WHITE SOX (SS) 5. Jamie Moyer threw 92 pitches over four innings, the latest step in his comeback bid, and Dexter Fowler hit a two-run homer to help Colorado beat a split squad of White Sox.

The 49-year-old Moyer, who sat out last season while recovering from Tommy John surgery, gave up three runs and seven hits. He walked three and struck out four, facing 22 batters in all.

"I've definitely pitched at least three days in a row and been hot and ready to go for the fourth game in a row and felt good," Marshall said. "It depends on how many pitches I've thrown in an outing. I've had some success doing it."

"If necessary, I think I'm more than capable of doing it."

The injuries to Madson, Masset and Bray could affect how the Reds handle left-hander Aroldis Chapman, entering his third season with Cincinnati. He was a starter in the minors in 2010, then was turned into a reliever at midseason to help the Reds win the NL Central title. He struggled with his control as a reliever last season, and the Reds planned to move him back into a starting role this year, perhaps letting him begin the season at Triple-A. The injuries in the bullpen could change those plans.

Chapman would rather start than relieve.

"Everybody has their preferences," Baker said. "But I'm sure he'd rather be in the big leagues. I'm sure that's his preference. Almost all of the guys in there (clubhouse) were starters."

Suzuki stars in Japan, Mariners beat A's in MLB opener

TOKYO — Ichiro Suzuki looked perfectly at home, putting on the kind of show that made him so popular in Japan.

Too bad most fans across America couldn't follow along.

Suzuki got four hits and plenty of attention as the Seattle Mariners beat the Oakland Athletics, 3-1 in 11 innings Wednesday night in the Major League Baseball opener.

A capacity crowd of 44,227 lit up Tokyo Dome with camera flashes every time Suzuki came to bat. He drew a standing ovation when he took his position in right field in the final inning.

"It was very special to open in Japan," said Suzuki, a star for nine seasons in Osaka with the Orix Blue Wave. "I wanted to have fun and give the fans something at this special time and wanted to share a special moment with them."

"The festivities for opening day were awesome, the detail, the time they put into it. I loved every minute of it. I love being in Japan."

MLB eyes London Olympic stadium for baseball games

ROME — Major League Baseball officials have been watching the NBA, NFL and NHL play games in Europe. Now, stadiums in London and the Netherlands could provide the chance for baseball to follow suit.

The biggest obstacle for MLB in Europe has been to find a facility with the right dimensions and seating capacity, and London's Olympic Stadium is under consideration.

"That (London) stadium, the way it's built, actually is big enough for a baseball game," Clive Russell of MLB International told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "It's not perfect, but it has some real potential."

West Ham soccer club is among the bidders vying to take over the stadium after the Olympics, and Russell said MLB is also talking to the games' legacy committee.

The London stadium will seat 80,000 spectators for the Olympics. After the games, it will be downsized to a 60,000-capacity multipurpose venue that includes track and field.

Russell said MLB has measured the London stadium. "It's tight and there would be some struggles with sight-lines," he said.

Another option is a new $20 million stadium being built near Schipol airport in the Netherlands, which will have 3,000 permanent seats but room for temporary seating of 25,000. It's expected to open in early 2014.

"So right now they're the front-runners," Russell said while attending the presentation of the Italian baseball season. "If you build it we will come."

Royals' Paulino to 15-day DL

SURPRISE, Ariz. — Kansas City Royals right-hander Felipe Paulino will begin the season on the 15-day disabled list with a sore elbow.

"Paulino has been dealing with some forearm stiffness on-and-off all spring," manager Ned Yost said Wednesday. "He dealt with it some last year. It's not anything that's serious, but we're just running out of time. If it was a regular-season scenario, it would probably be a situation where he would miss one start. But we don't have the luxury right now."

Paulino was diagnosed with a right forearm flexor pronator strain.

Paulino was competing for a rotation spot, but has been erratic in spring training. He'd allowed 10 runs and 13 hits in 9 2/3 innings in his last three appearances.

"We're talking about shutting him down four or five days and get him back in his throwing program," Yost said. "It just doesn't make any sense to try to push that especially where we are in terms of spring training. Once you get stiff, you can start to run into the danger of getting ligament damage. We want to stay away from that."

Paulino went 4-6 with a 4.11 ERA in 21 games after the Royals acquired him from Colorado.

With Paulino out, left-hander Danny Duffy and right-hander Luis Mendoza, who is 4-0 with a 0.54 ERA this spring, will fill the final two slots in the rotation.

Vizquel to be put on Blue Jays' roster

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Omar Vizquel has played his way into yet another season in the majors.

Boosted by an excellent showing in spring training, the backup infielder was told Wednesday that he'd made the team and would be added to Toronto's roster.

Vizquel found out a month before his 45th birthday, making him the oldest active position player in the big leagues.

The 11-time Gold Glove winner had signed a minor league contract Jan. 23. He spent the previous two years with the Chicago White Sox as a utilityman and mentor to younger players.

REDS: plan to use closer-by-committee

The bullpen seemed to be vastly improved over last season when the Reds signed Madson to replace Francisco Cordero and traded with the Cubs to get Marshall, one of the best setup men in the NL. They also had right-hander Nick Masset and left-hander Bill Bray returning for late-inning roles.

Already, those plans are ruined.

The bullpen took another hit Wednesday when Masset was told he'll have to start the season on the 15-day disabled list because of inflammation in his right shoulder that has sidelined him for most of March. Bray has been limited by a strained groin during spring training.

With so many changes because of injury, Baker is inclined to see how the relievers respond in new roles before he settles on one of them as the primary closer.

"We might have to go with the famous 'by committee' — which I hate — until somebody will emerge," Baker said. "You hate to have to go through it until somebody fails, then give it to somebody else. Those are valuable games. It takes about 30 seconds to mess up 2½ hours of work by somebody."

Marshall pitched a scoreless inning Tuesday, extending his streak to six scoreless outings. He agreed to a three-year contract extension during spring training that will bring him an additional $16.5 million. The Reds see him as a potential closer in years to come if Madson isn't available.

Madson got a one-year, $8.5 million deal from Cincinnati. There's a mutual option for next year at $11 million with a $2.5 million buyout.

Marshall went 6-6 with a 2.26 ERA and a career-high five saves with the Cubs last season. He said no one from the Reds has talked to him about moving into the closer's role sooner than expected with Madson hurt.

"Obviously the job is available," Marshall said. "I'd like the opportunity to pitch in that role, but it's what's best for the team. If it is a closer-by-committee situation, that could work out good too, I think."

Marshall is willing to work three or four days in a row if needed.

JUNIOR: off to hot start this season

his way in an attempt to reclaim the win. With Kyle Busch right behind him, Earnhardt instead just held on for the second-place finish.

Although his fans wish he'd gotten more aggressive, Earnhardt remains convinced a year later he did all he could.

"I don't know what I could have done other than try to probably get myself blocked wrecking him, or probably get wrecked by somebody behind me," Earnhardt said. "I don't think I could have done anything different that would have made a better outcome for me. If I did anything different, the outcome would have probably been worse for me."

As he looks back, though, Earnhardt believes it was a monumental moment for his No. 88 race team in what ultimately became a comeback season for NASCAR's most popular driver. Although he didn't win a race, he made it back into NASCAR's Chase for the Sprint Cup championship and wound up seventh in the final standings. It was his best finish since he ended the 2005 season ranked fifth.

"It was a good experience, even though we did lose, and that was really hard to deal with, being so close," Earnhardt said. "But I took a lot of positives from it and that weekend helped us instead of hurting my resolve. Being so close, it helped us as a team and as a driver."

But Earnhardt said he's feeling even better about his situation now, five weeks into a new season. He opened the year with a second-place finish in the Daytona 500, has three top-10 finishes and is coming off a third-place finish in Sunday's rain-shortened race at California.

His numbers would potentially look better if not for a late speeding penalty that led to his 15th-place finish. He goes into Martinsville ranked third in the standings, and has not been ranked lower than sixth this year.

"I just want the good fortune to keep going. In the big span of things, you are not here for a very long time, and I feel like I've got a lot of career left and I know how difficult it is to right the ship, and how difficult it is to be competitive and compete in this series," he said. "But I ain't taking it for granted. I just want to have a solid year, win some races, get back to Victory Lane."

Sunday might be the day.

Earnhardt has seven top-10 finishes in his last 10 starts at Martinsville, and, over his last 20 starts, he has nine top-five finishes.

"It's a pretty fun track," Earnhardt Jr. said. "We've had some good success there. I'm hoping to have a good race like we did last year and maybe have an opportunity to try to be in the battle for the win."

HORSE RACING

Wood Memorial is next for Derby hopeful Alpha

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
AP Sports Writer

It's a hectic yet hopeful time for Kieran McLaughlin in his pursuit of winning the Kentucky Derby.

The trainer of Alpha just couldn't seem to make up his mind where to race his promising 3-year-old colt for a final prep before heading to Churchill Downs for the Derby on May 5. One day it's the Florida Derby, another it's the Louisiana Derby, and another it's the Wood Memorial.

The latest? The Wood at Aqueduct on April 7 has the nod.

"There's a flight to New York on April 4, but that's a little close to the race," McLaughlin said from his winter base in Florida over the weekend. "There might be another one going up on (March 30). We'll figure it out."

The dilemma was this: McLaughlin likes to believe he can win a big race before committing, and that left Saturday's $1 million Florida Derby out because the trainer feels top Derby contender Union Rags is too good right now. He also was looking to avoid Gotham winner Hansen in the $1 million Wood, and considered the $1 million Louisiana Derby, which is Sunday.

But a little game of musical races shook things up last week when owner Kendall Hansen changed his mind about the horse he named for himself. Hansen is now headed to the Blue Grass on April 14, leaving McLaughlin with perhaps his top choice all along, the Wood.

"He's in great shape," McLaughlin said following Alpha's five-furlong workout in 1:00.99 at Palm Meadows Training Center in Boynton Beach, Fla., on Sunday. "He'll definitely be there."

Fountain of Youth winner Union Rags and last year's 2-year-old champion Hansen once again are 1-2 in The Associated Press' latest Run to the Roses Top 10 list of Derby contenders. Alpha, winner of the Withers at Aqueduct on Feb. 4 in his most recent start, is No. 5. Risen Star winner El Padrino is third, and Rebel winner Secret Circle is fourth.

Union Rags put in a solid four-furlong workout in 49.10 seconds at Palm Meadows on Saturday, with trainer Michael Matz

1. Union Rags (Michael Matz, trainer; Julien Lejaroux, jockey): Fountain of Youth (G2) winner worked 4 furlongs in 49.10 Sunday at Palm Meadows under exercise rider Peter Brette. ... Has four wins in five career starts. ... Next start: Florida Derby (G1), Gulfstream, Saturday. ... Derby future wager odds: 4-1.

2. Hansen (Mike Maker, Ramon Dominguez): Change of plans has colt staying home in Kentucky for final Derby prep. ... Gotham (G3) winner worked 5 furlongs in leisurely 1:01.20 Saturday at Churchill Downs trackside training center. ... Next start: Blue Grass (G1), Keeneland, April 14. ... Odds: 9-1.

3. El Padrino (Todd Pletcher, Javier Castellano): Risen Star (G2) winner worked 4 furlongs in 49.00 Sunday at Palm Meadows. ... Next start: Florida Derby. ... Odds: 12-1.

4. Secret Circle (Bob Baffert, Rafael Bejarano): Rebel (G2) winner has won five of six races. ... Next start: Arkansas Derby, Oaklawn, April 7. ... Odds: 37-1.

5. Alpha (Kieran McLaughlin, Dominguez): Withers (G3) winner worked 5 furlongs in a fast 1:00.99 Sunday at Palm Meadows. ... A few race changes now has colt headed to New York for final Derby prep. ... Next start: Wood Memorial, Aqueduct, April 7. ... Odds: 18-1.

6. Gemologist (Pletcher, Castellano): Unbeaten in four races, but likely needs strong effort in final Derby prep to pick up graded stakes earnings. ... Next start: Wood Memorial. ... Odds: 23-1.

7. Creative Cause (Mike Harrington, Joel Rosario): San Felipe (G2) winner worked 5 furlongs in 59.40 last Tuesday at Hollywood Park. ... Next start: Santa Anita Derby (G1), Santa Anita, April 7. ... Odds: 17-1.

8. Bodemeister (Baffert, Bejarano): San Felipe runner-up worked 4 furlongs in 46.80 at Santa Anita last week. ... Final Derby prep not set. ... Next start: Santa Anita Derby or Arkansas Derby. ... Odds: 29-1.

9. Howe Great (Graham Motion, John Velazquez): ... Palm Beach (G3) winner needs strong effort in next race, then needs to show he likes Churchill Downs dirt. ... Next start: Blue Grass (G1). ... Odds: 3-1 (mutuel field).

10. Mark Valeski (Larry Jones, Rosie Napravnik): Risen Star runner-up worked 5 furlongs in 59.40 at the Fair Grounds last week. ... Next start: Louisiana Derby (G1), Fair Grounds, April 1. ... Odds: 38-1.

pleased at the big colt's progress.

"I think he should take a step forward from that," Matz said in reference to Union Rags' four-length win in the Fountain of Youth. "I would hope that having a race under his belt would help him in the Florida Derby."

There could be a shake-up in the Top 10 by the end of the weekend, with Union Rags and El Padrino meeting up in the Florida Derby, and No. 10 Mark Valeski running in the Louisiana Derby.

A few new Derby prospects emerged over the weekend in Went the Day Well, who won the $500,000 Spiral Stakes at Turfway Park, and Daddy Nose Best, who won the $800,000 Sunland Derby in New Mexico.

Trainer Graham Motion, who won last year's Kentucky Derby with Animal Kingdom, may end up with several horses in the race this year. He trains Went the Day Well and No. 9 Howe Great, winner of the Palm Beach Stakes two weeks ago. He also trains Lucky Chappy, set to run in the UAE Derby in Dubai on Saturday.

Animal Kingdom won the Spiral before taking the Derby, but there's a chance Went the Day Well could have one more prep – the Lexington Stakes on April 21 – before heading to the Derby.

"Just because we won it last year, I don't think we're any more pushing to get there," Motion said. "If anything, it makes it easier because having won the race – which I never imagined I would do at this stage of my career – maybe I'm a little less (anxious). I want to be there for the right reasons."

Dishonesty never pays

Governments lose billions of tax dollars every year from the income of individuals and businesses, as well as from unpaid taxes. Tax evasion can take many different forms: Tax shelters, undeclared work, excessive tax planning, omitting to submit an income tax return or to declare revenue earned from investments on the stock exchange, etc.

Consequences for tax evaders
Tax evasion has major consequences for those who are caught: It can result in a criminal conviction. If they are found guilty, they could receive a heavy fine, go to prison or end up with a criminal record with all the negative repercussions this situation can result in.

Consequences for the general public
This embezzlement of public funds also has consequences for society in general.

Governments invest considerable sums of money in attempting to catch poor payers and tax evaders. This money, added to that lost every year due to tax evasion, amounts to a huge loss of revenue for governments. These losses directly affect their level of debt and influence their capacity to provide services and to finance programs in response to the needs of our society; social programs are often the first to be cut. Moreover, law-abiding individuals see their tax burden increased unfairly.

Tax evaders, as much as society in general, are affected by tax evasion. So pay what you owe now before having to pay too much at a later date.
